Roundabout

CANDELA SIERRA \(Spanish National Comic Award 2025\)

City of Valencia Award for Comics 2022

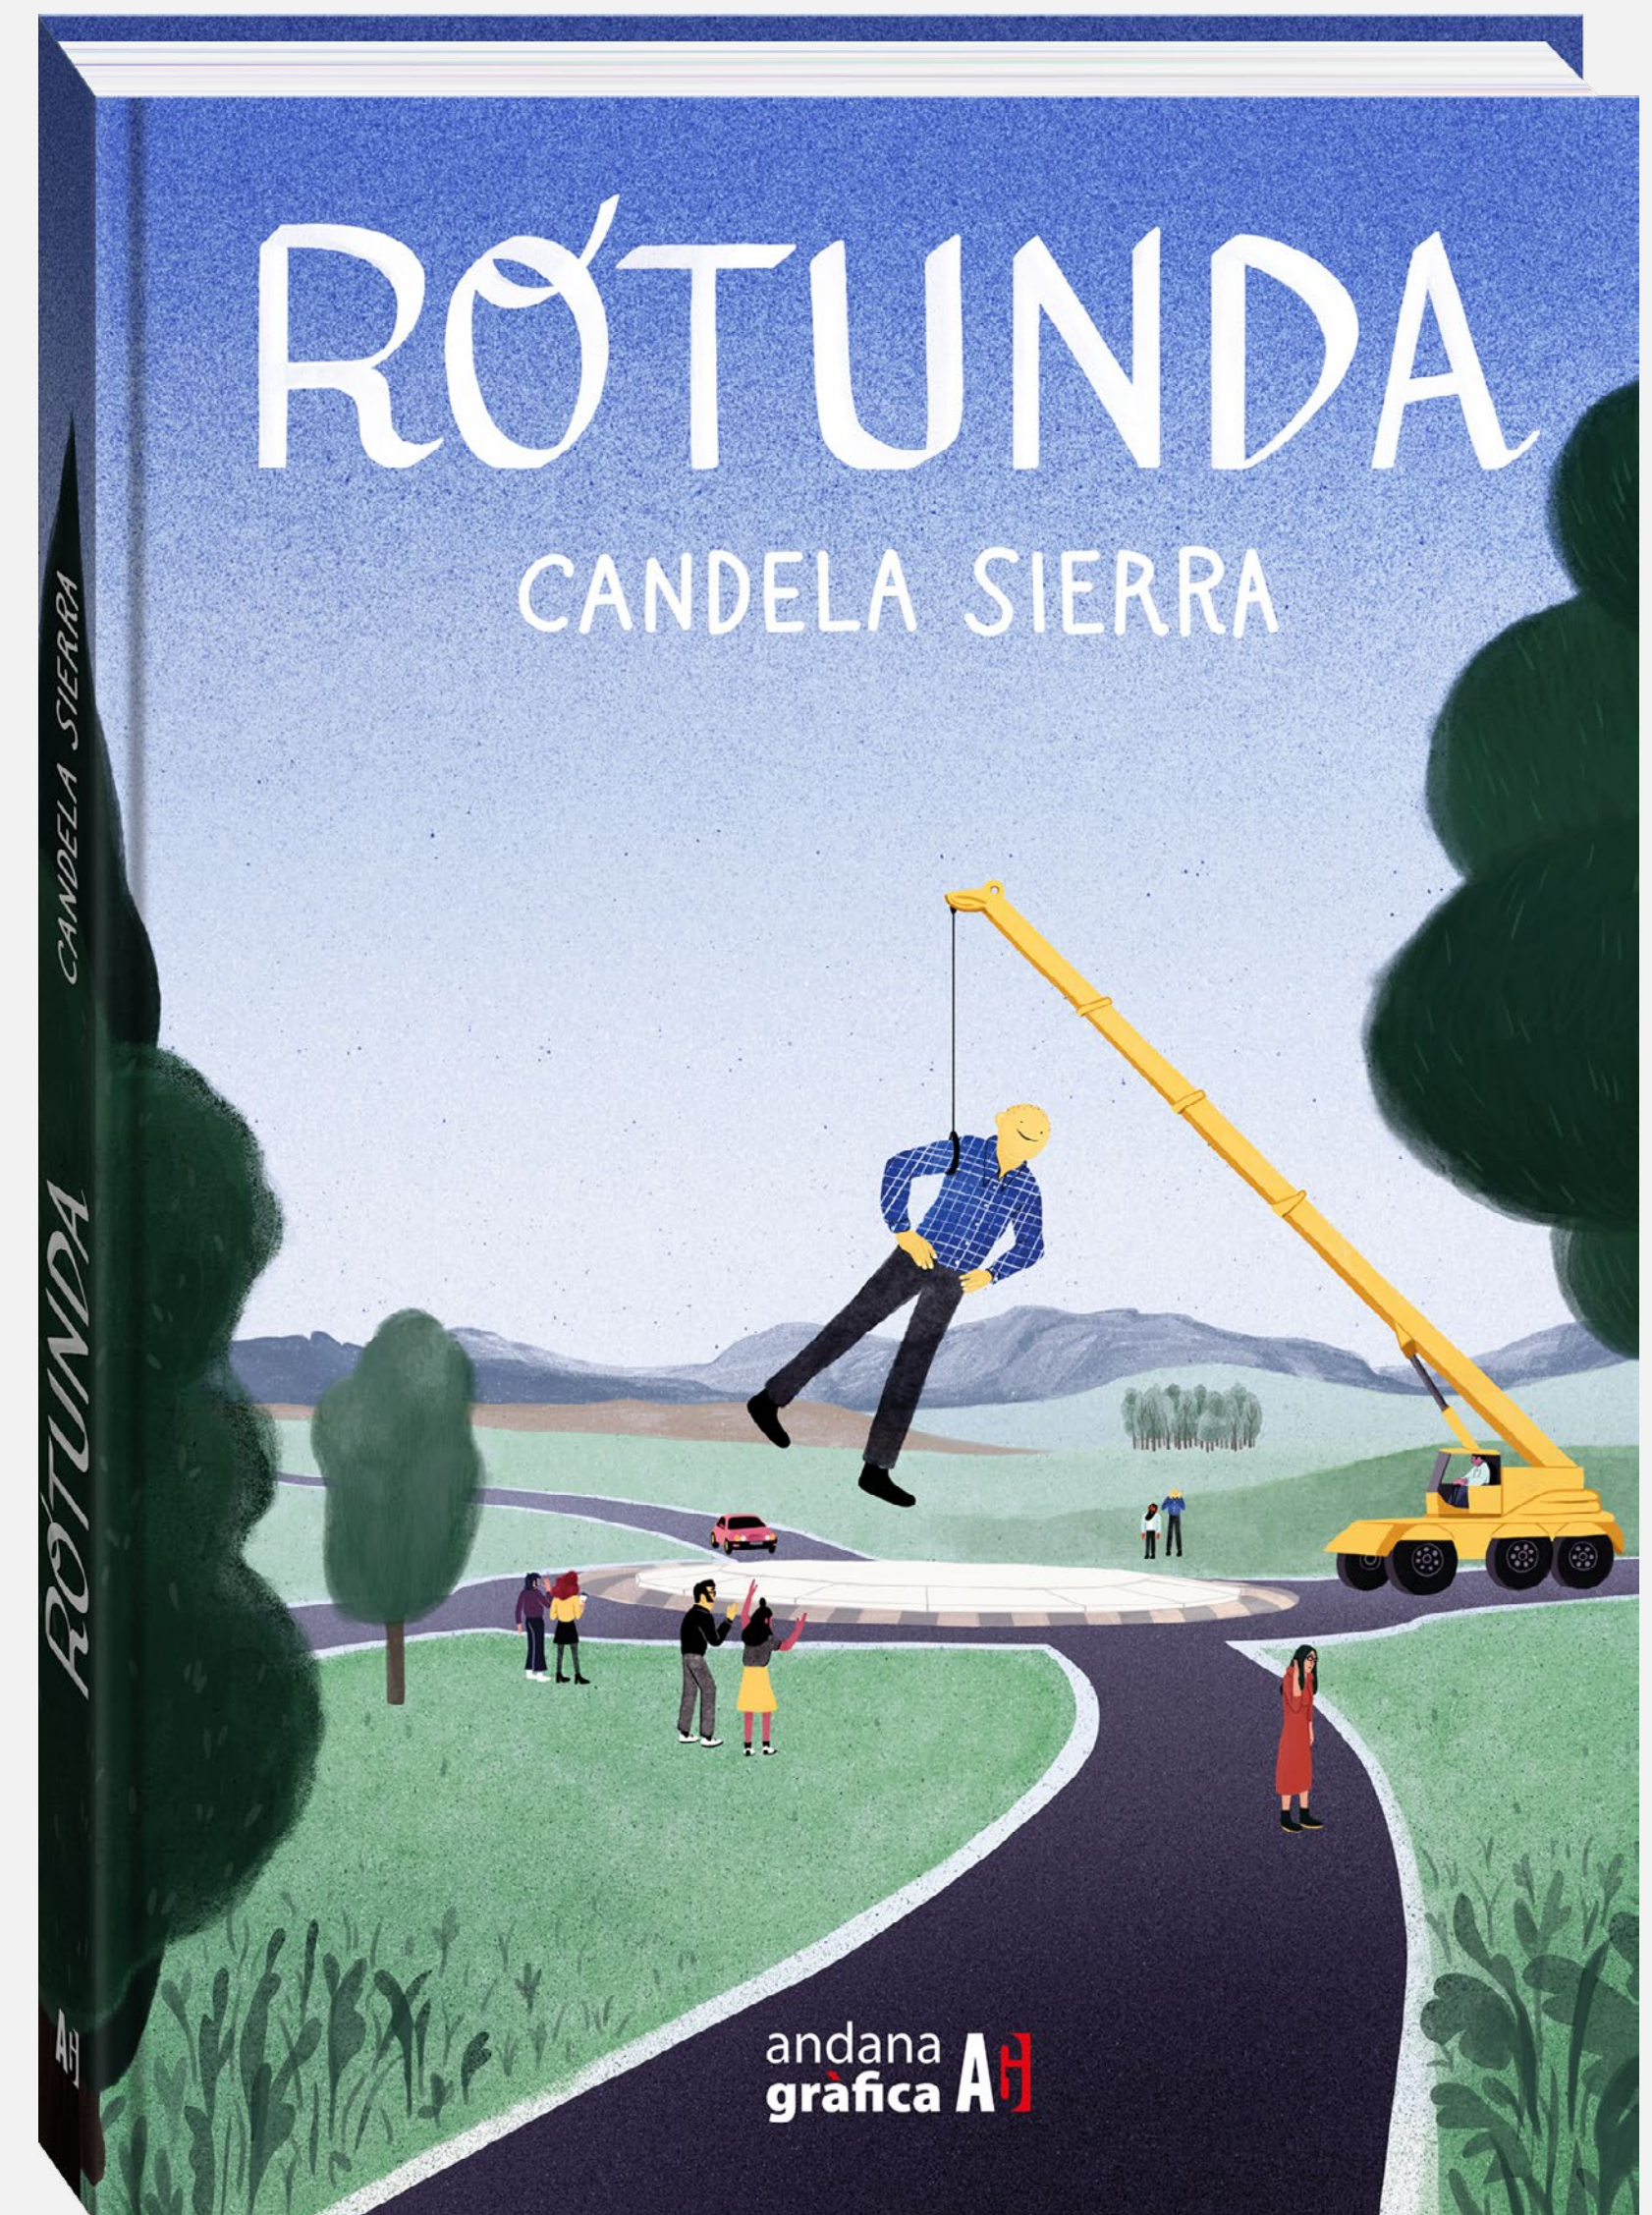

A young art graduate's first job in a design studio slowly unravels into a toxic work environment. Will she keep moving in circles or find her own way out?

Brisa is stuck waiting tables and can't find work in her field until luck changes. She lands a contract as a sculptor at an architecture firm specializing in roundabouts. At first, everything seems perfect: she is given more responsibility and makes genuine friends among her colleagues.

The only mystery is Junior, the firm's director. Always smiling and radiating "positive vibes," he hides behind a polished façade. But what does he actually do all day besides water the plants? When his father, the company's owner and main investor, pressures him, Junior's permanent grin fades. As manipulation and abuse of power escalate, Brisa realizes that even dream jobs have a dark side and that no role is worth giving up your boundaries.

Apricot season

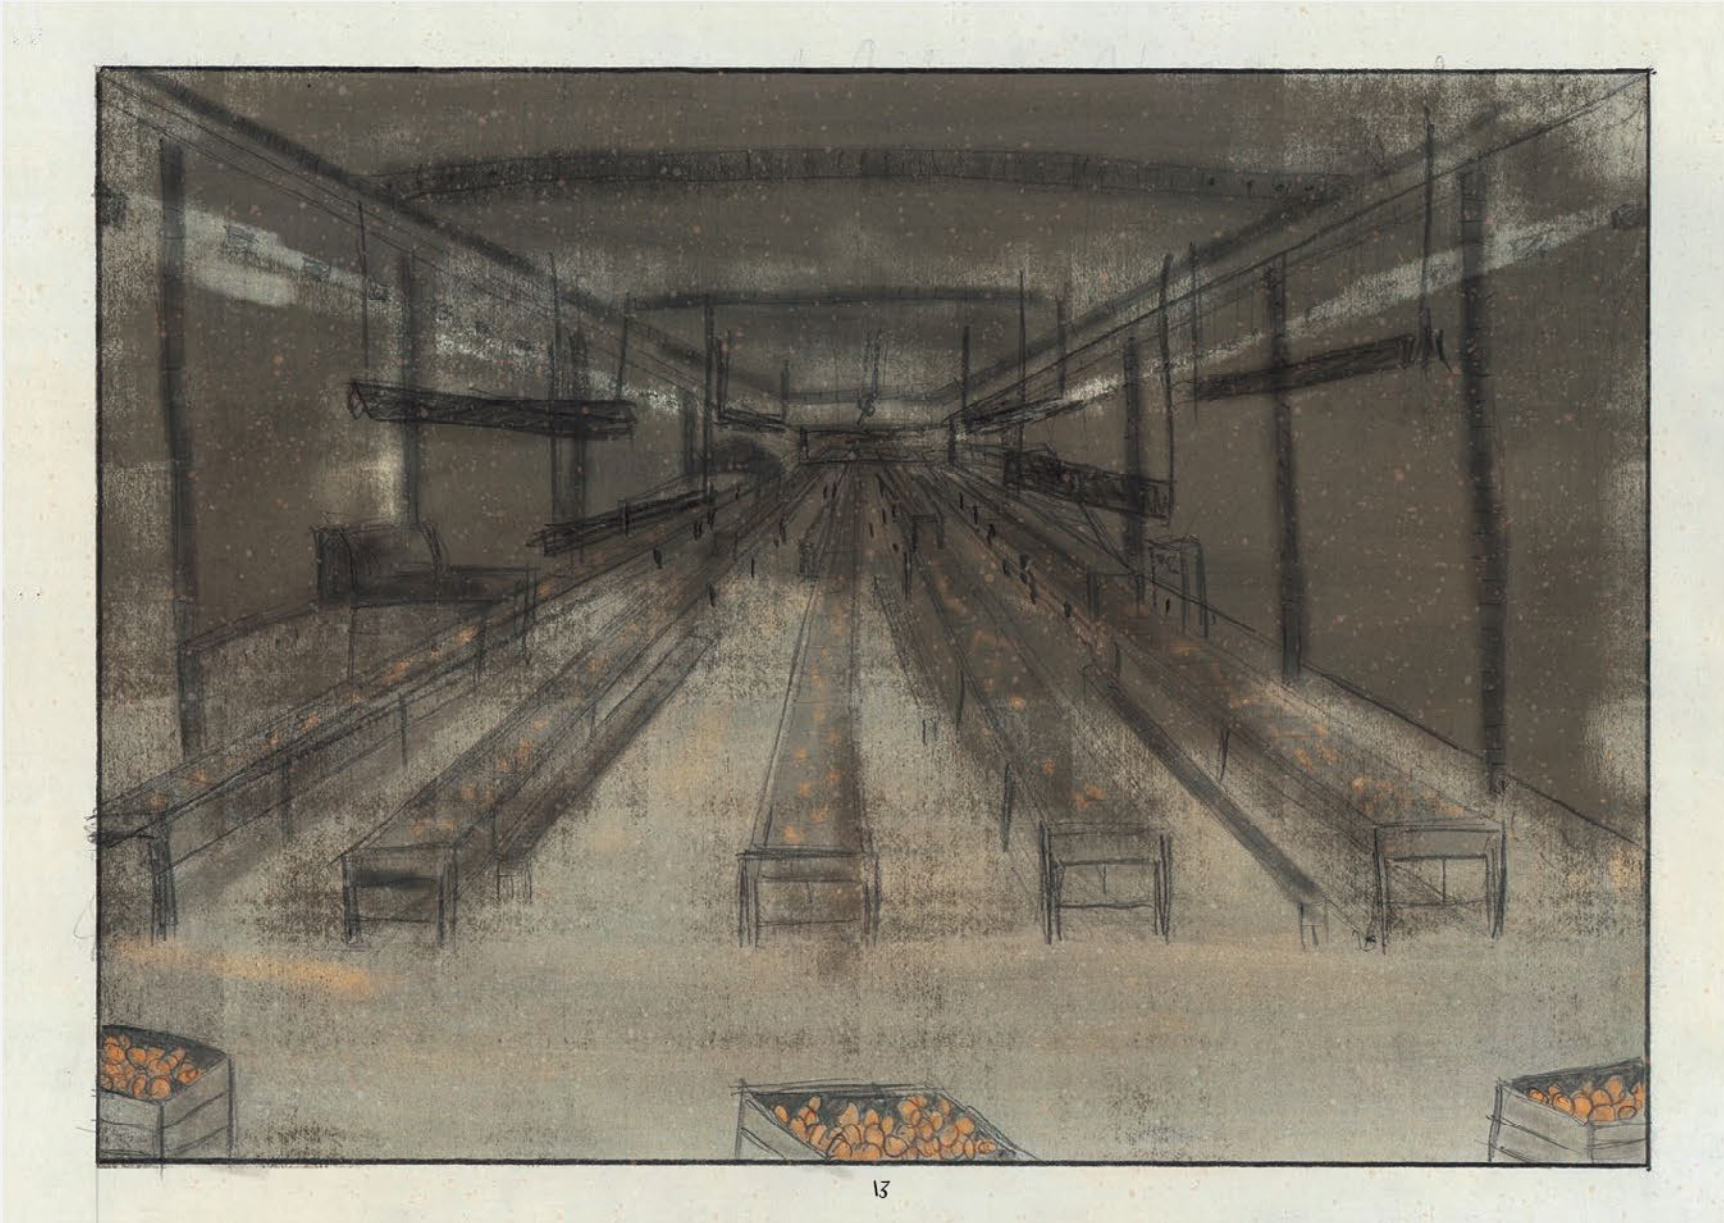

ÁNGEL ABELLÁN & ALBA FLORES

Factory life and female solidarity: an intimate portrait of working women in rural Spain.

In this factory in deep Spain, the dull gray of cement contrasts with the sweet scent of ripe fruit. A colorful group of coworkers runs the canning line: Juli, an unmotivated biology student repeatedly failing her final exam; Rita, who has just learned her partner is infertile; Carmen, whose husband's controlling behavior is beginning to worry the others; and Paqui, who has worked there for as long as she can remember and is now nearing retirement.

Every morning at eleven, the women gather to eat sandwiches and debate the virtues of chorizo. Beneath their identical hairnets, age and background vanish, and their fears, frustrations, and unspoken truths suddenly feel easier to carry as they stare together at the apricot fields stretching out behind the factory.

The periodic table: a comic full of chemistry

RAQUEL GU

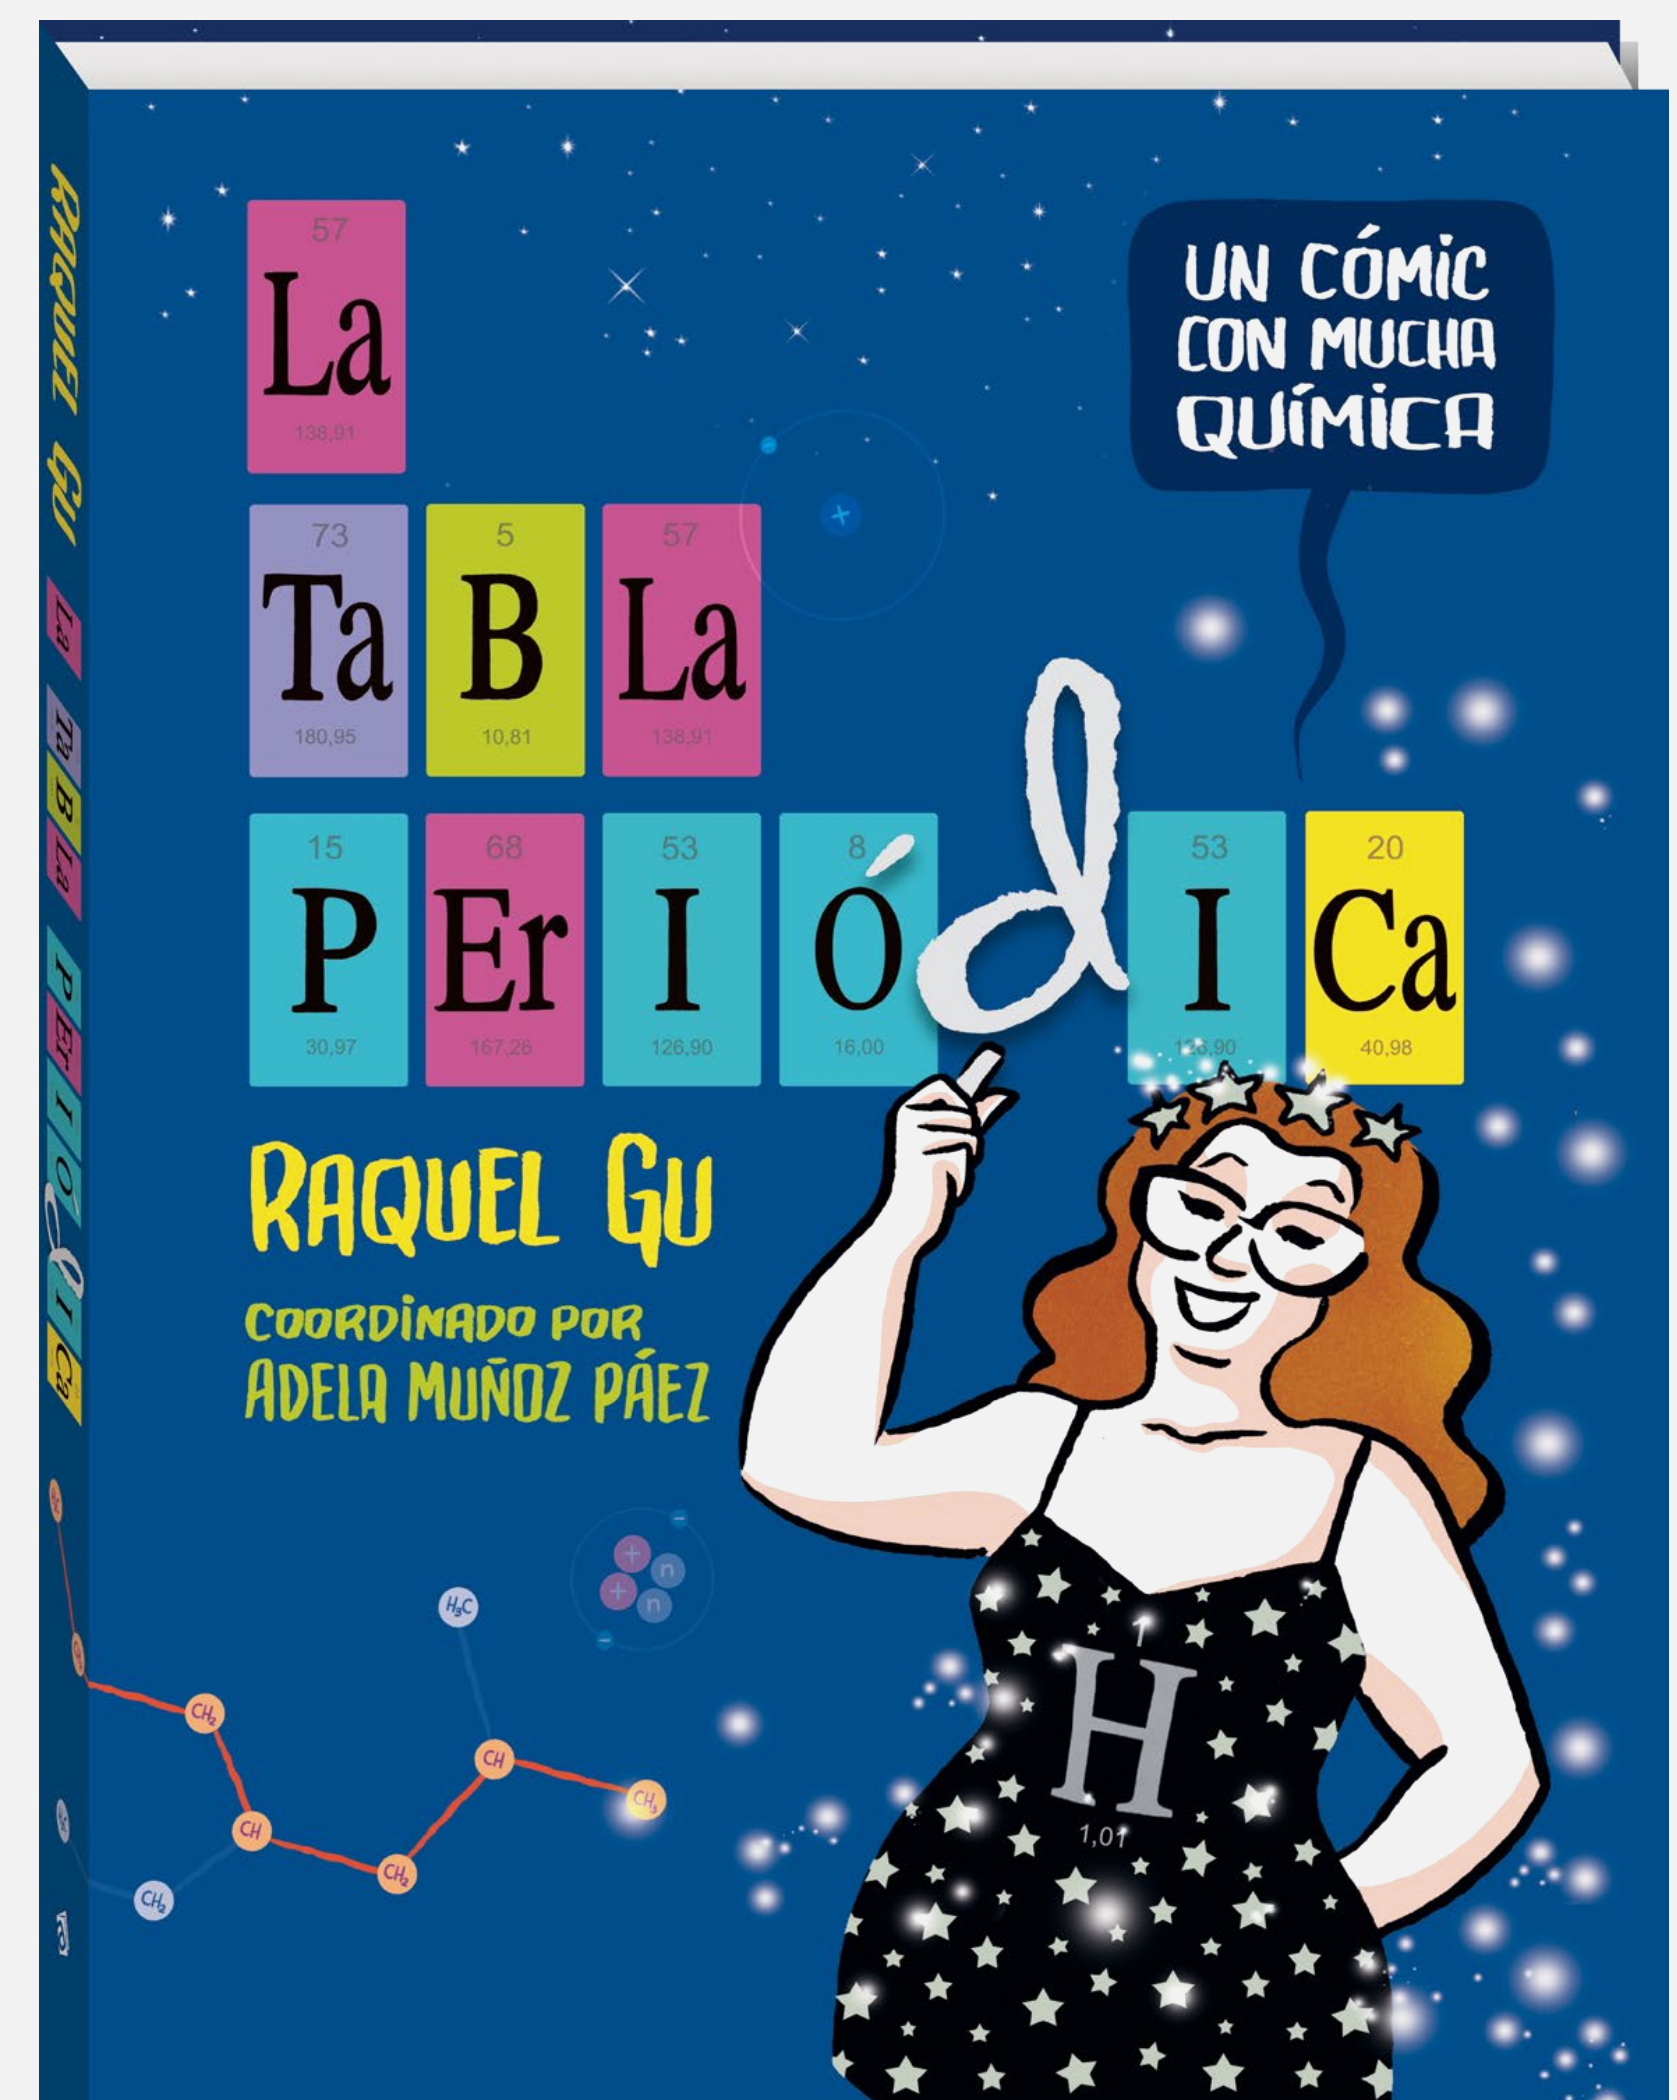

Meet the real stars of the Universe: the chemical elements! Everything, absolutely everything - stars, clouds, food, even your own body - is made up of them.

Does the periodic table seem too abstract to you? Raquel Gu, one of Spain's most beloved illustrators and science communicators, brings it to life in this fun, informative read for both young and old. She lets the 90 naturally occurring elements reveal themselves to us, alongside the 28 created by humans, and they certainly have stories to tell! Here, you will meet them all, each with its own story and personality... ahem, properties.

Discover why helium was named after the Sun god, how carbon appears not only in gasoline and airplanes but also in our clothes, and how the “bipolar” nitrogen is responsible both for the colors of the rainbow and the explosive power of dynamite.

Soy el helio, el segundo elemento más abundante del universo.

El segundo más ligero, el segundo que se formó tras el Big Bang...

¡Vamos, que soy UN SEGUNDÓN!

Pero soy el primero en otras cosas!

Soy el gas más ligero, por eso me usan para rellenar globos infantiles; y también soy el que se condensa a temperatura más baja...

por lo que soy imprescindible para enfriar los imanes superconductores que se usan en las pruebas médicas de resonancia.

Me descubrieron al analizar la radiación solar, por eso llevo el nombre del dios griego del sol, Helios, cosa que me encanta.

Tengo 2 protones y 2 neutrones en mi núcleo atómico, que es la terrible partícula alfa de las desintegraciones radiactivas, y 2 electrones en la corteza.

Y lo que más me gusta es subirme por las paredes de los recipientes que me contienen cuando me hallo en estado superfluido, y poner voz de pito a quien me respira.

Yo soy el litio, un metal de color blanco plateado; el más ligero y blando.

Mi nombre proviene del griego "lithos", que significa 'piedra'.

Fui descubierto por el químico sueco Johann Arfvedson en 1817.

Pertenezco al grupo de los alcalinos y, como todos en esta familia, soy muy reactivo, por lo que nunca me vais a encontrar como elemento libre...

Además, estoy en algo que usas casi a diario:

las pilas de litio, que tienen la vida más larga.

También formo compuestos con otros materiales, como aluminio, cadmio, cobre o manganeso, que se usan para construir aviones.

Japan, there and back

AINA RUI

From which perspective do we approach a new culture?

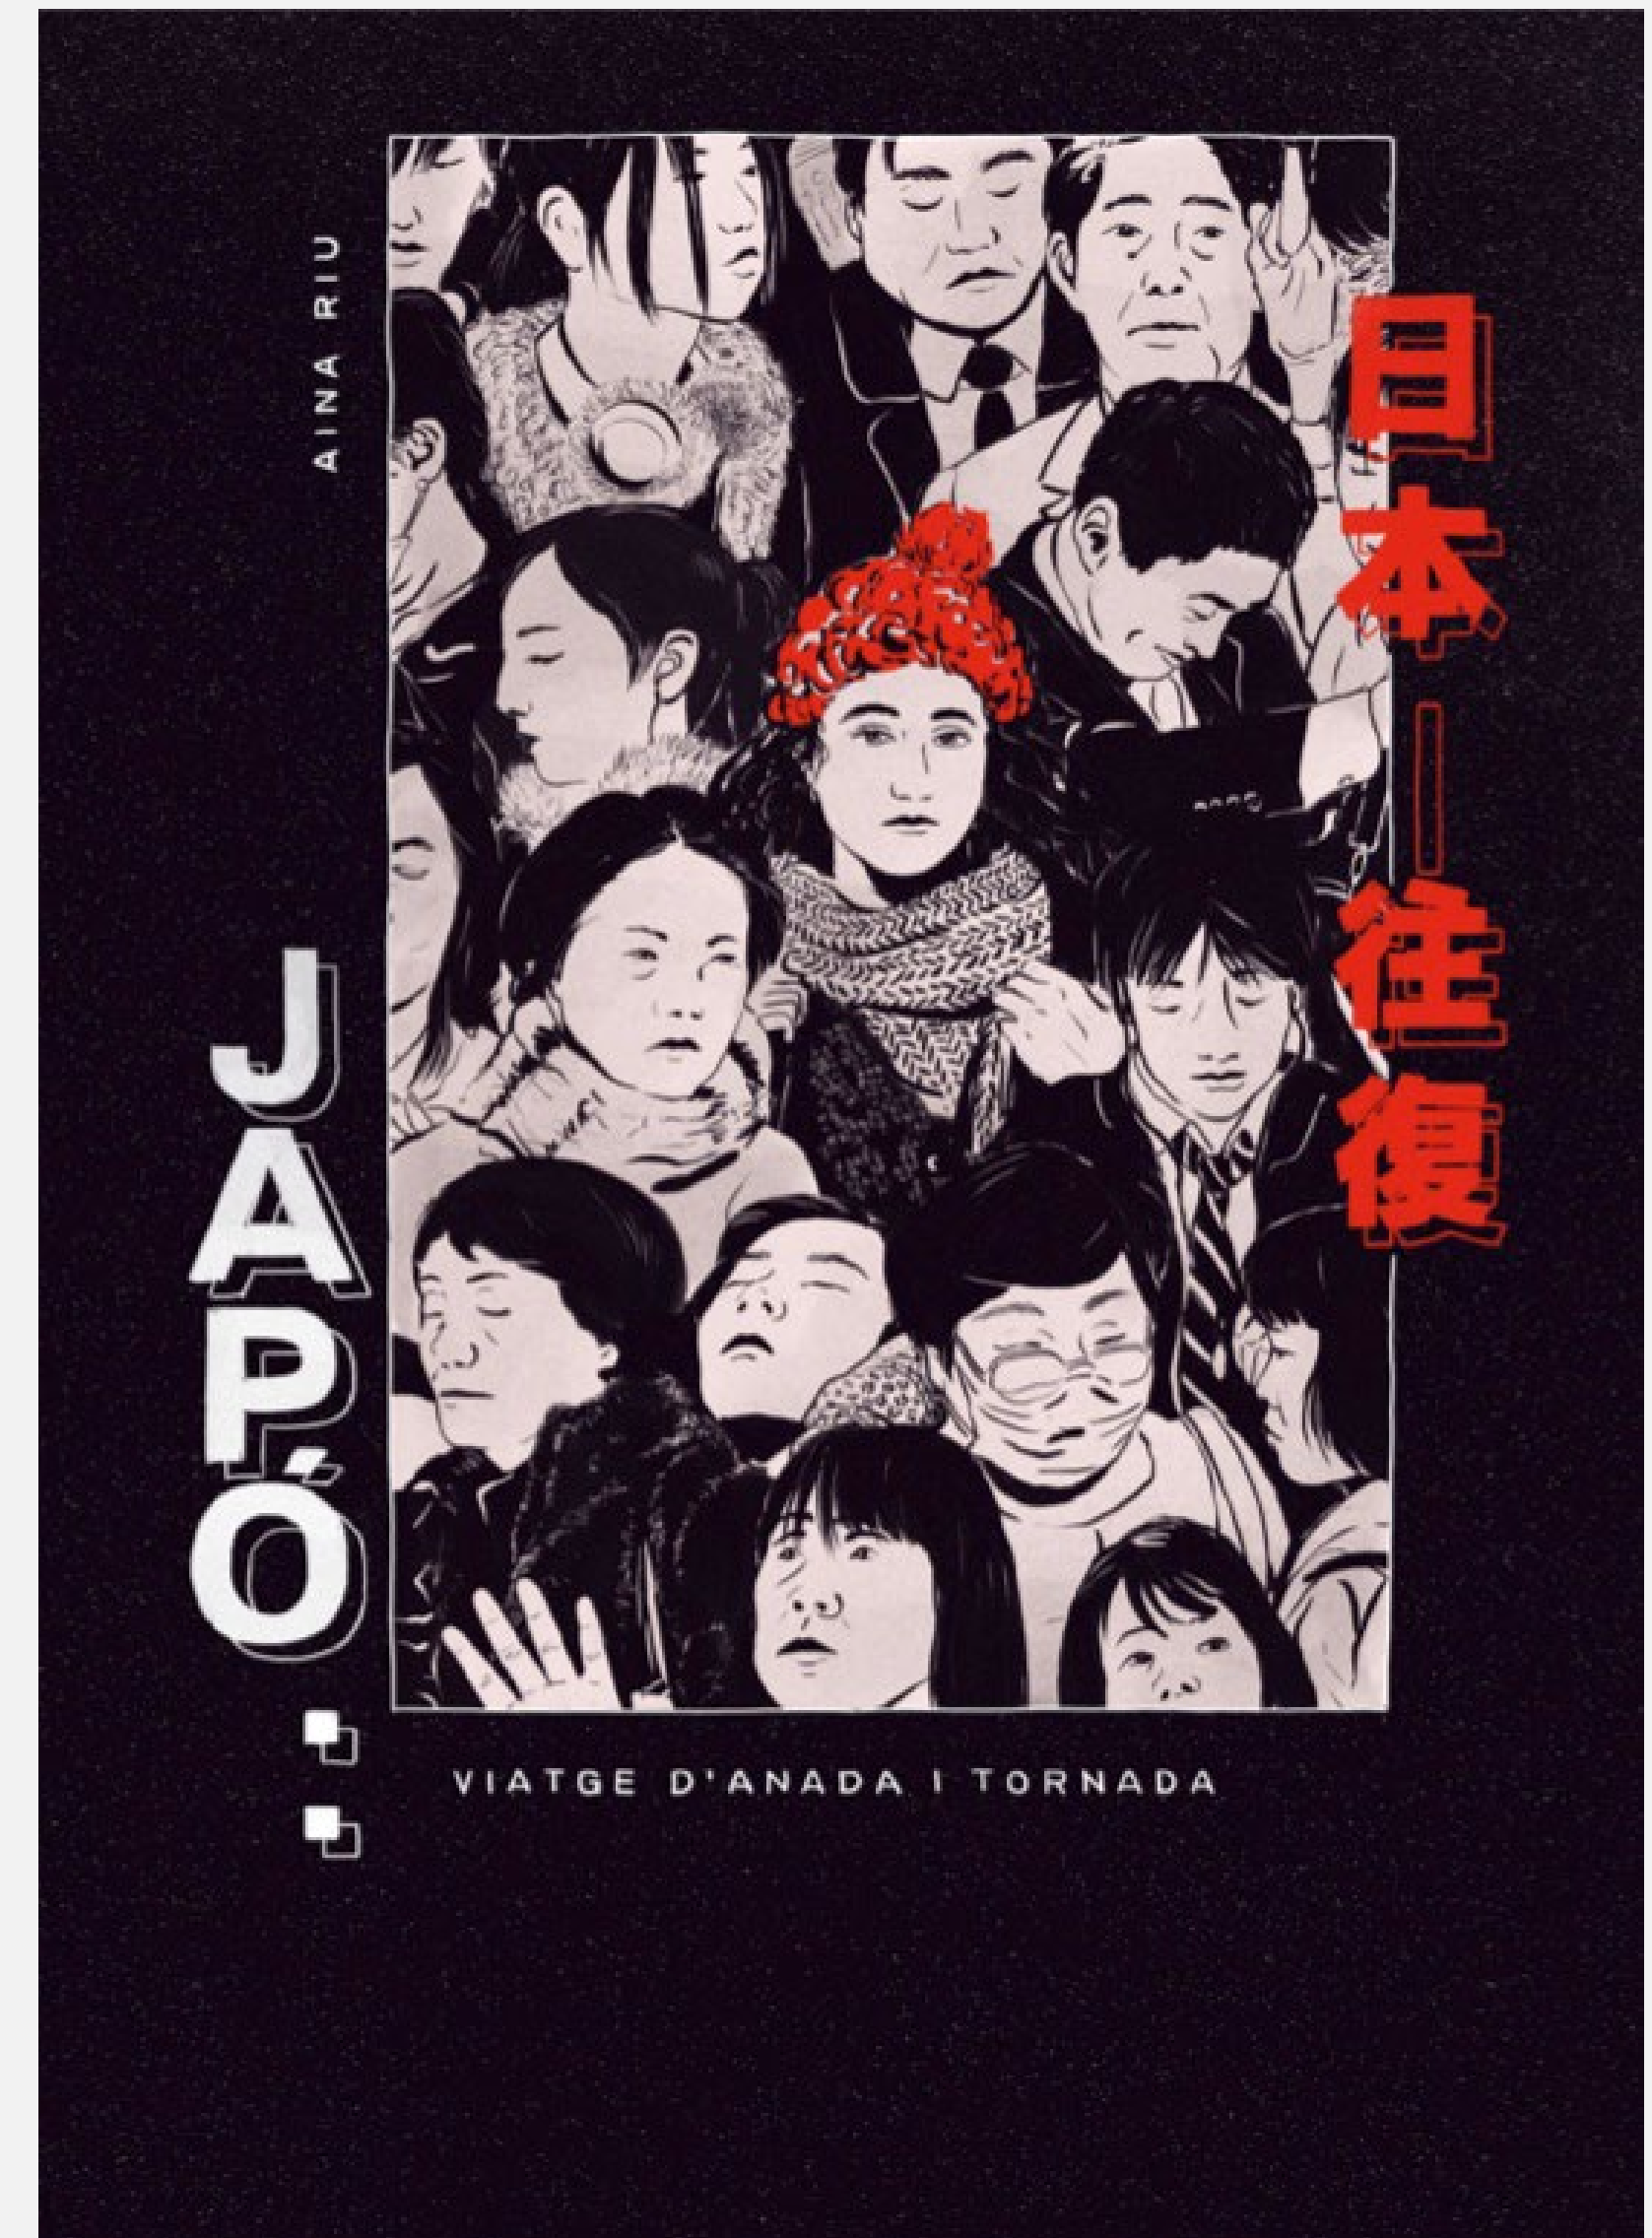

A bittersweet reflection on embracing alienation and the art of being lost in translation.

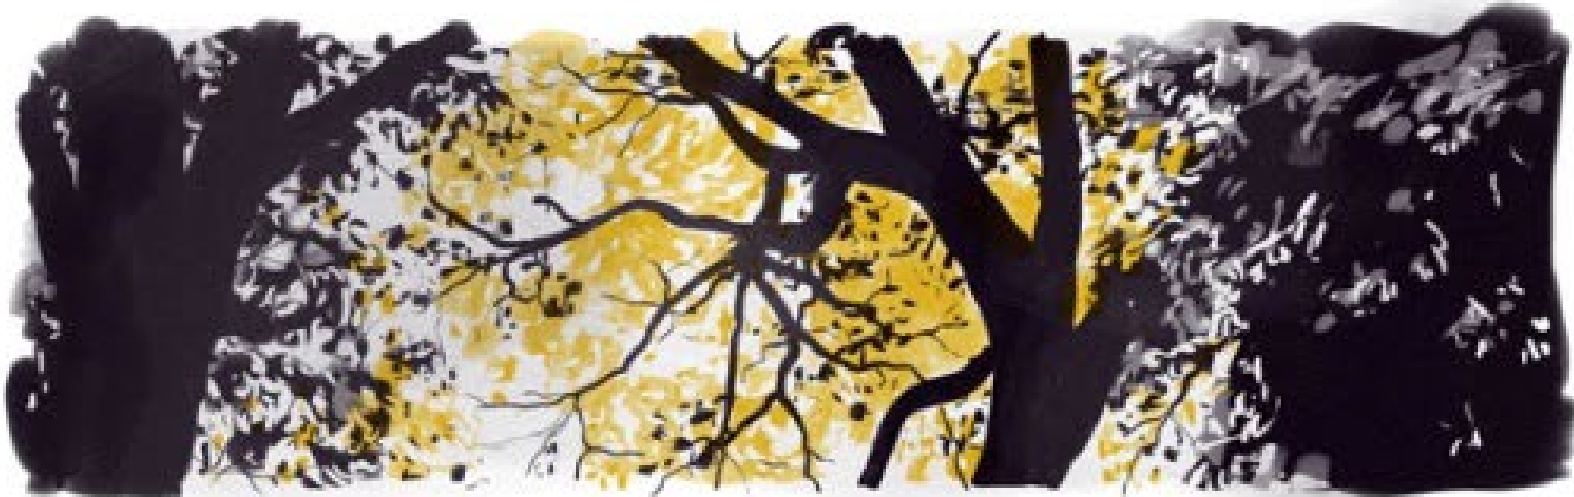

Aina, a fan of Japanese culture and a budding architect, is buzzing with anticipatory nostalgia as she lands in Nagoya. She is quickly disenchanted by her freezing flat and a workplace whose dynamics she cannot comprehend. Human relationships are as intricately tangled as the cables threading through the city.

As she recovers from the initial shock, she realizes she may return with something entirely different from what she had set out to find, and that her journey will be more complex than a simple there-and-back.

The boss of Barcelona

ÒSCAR SARRAMIA & RAMON PARDINA

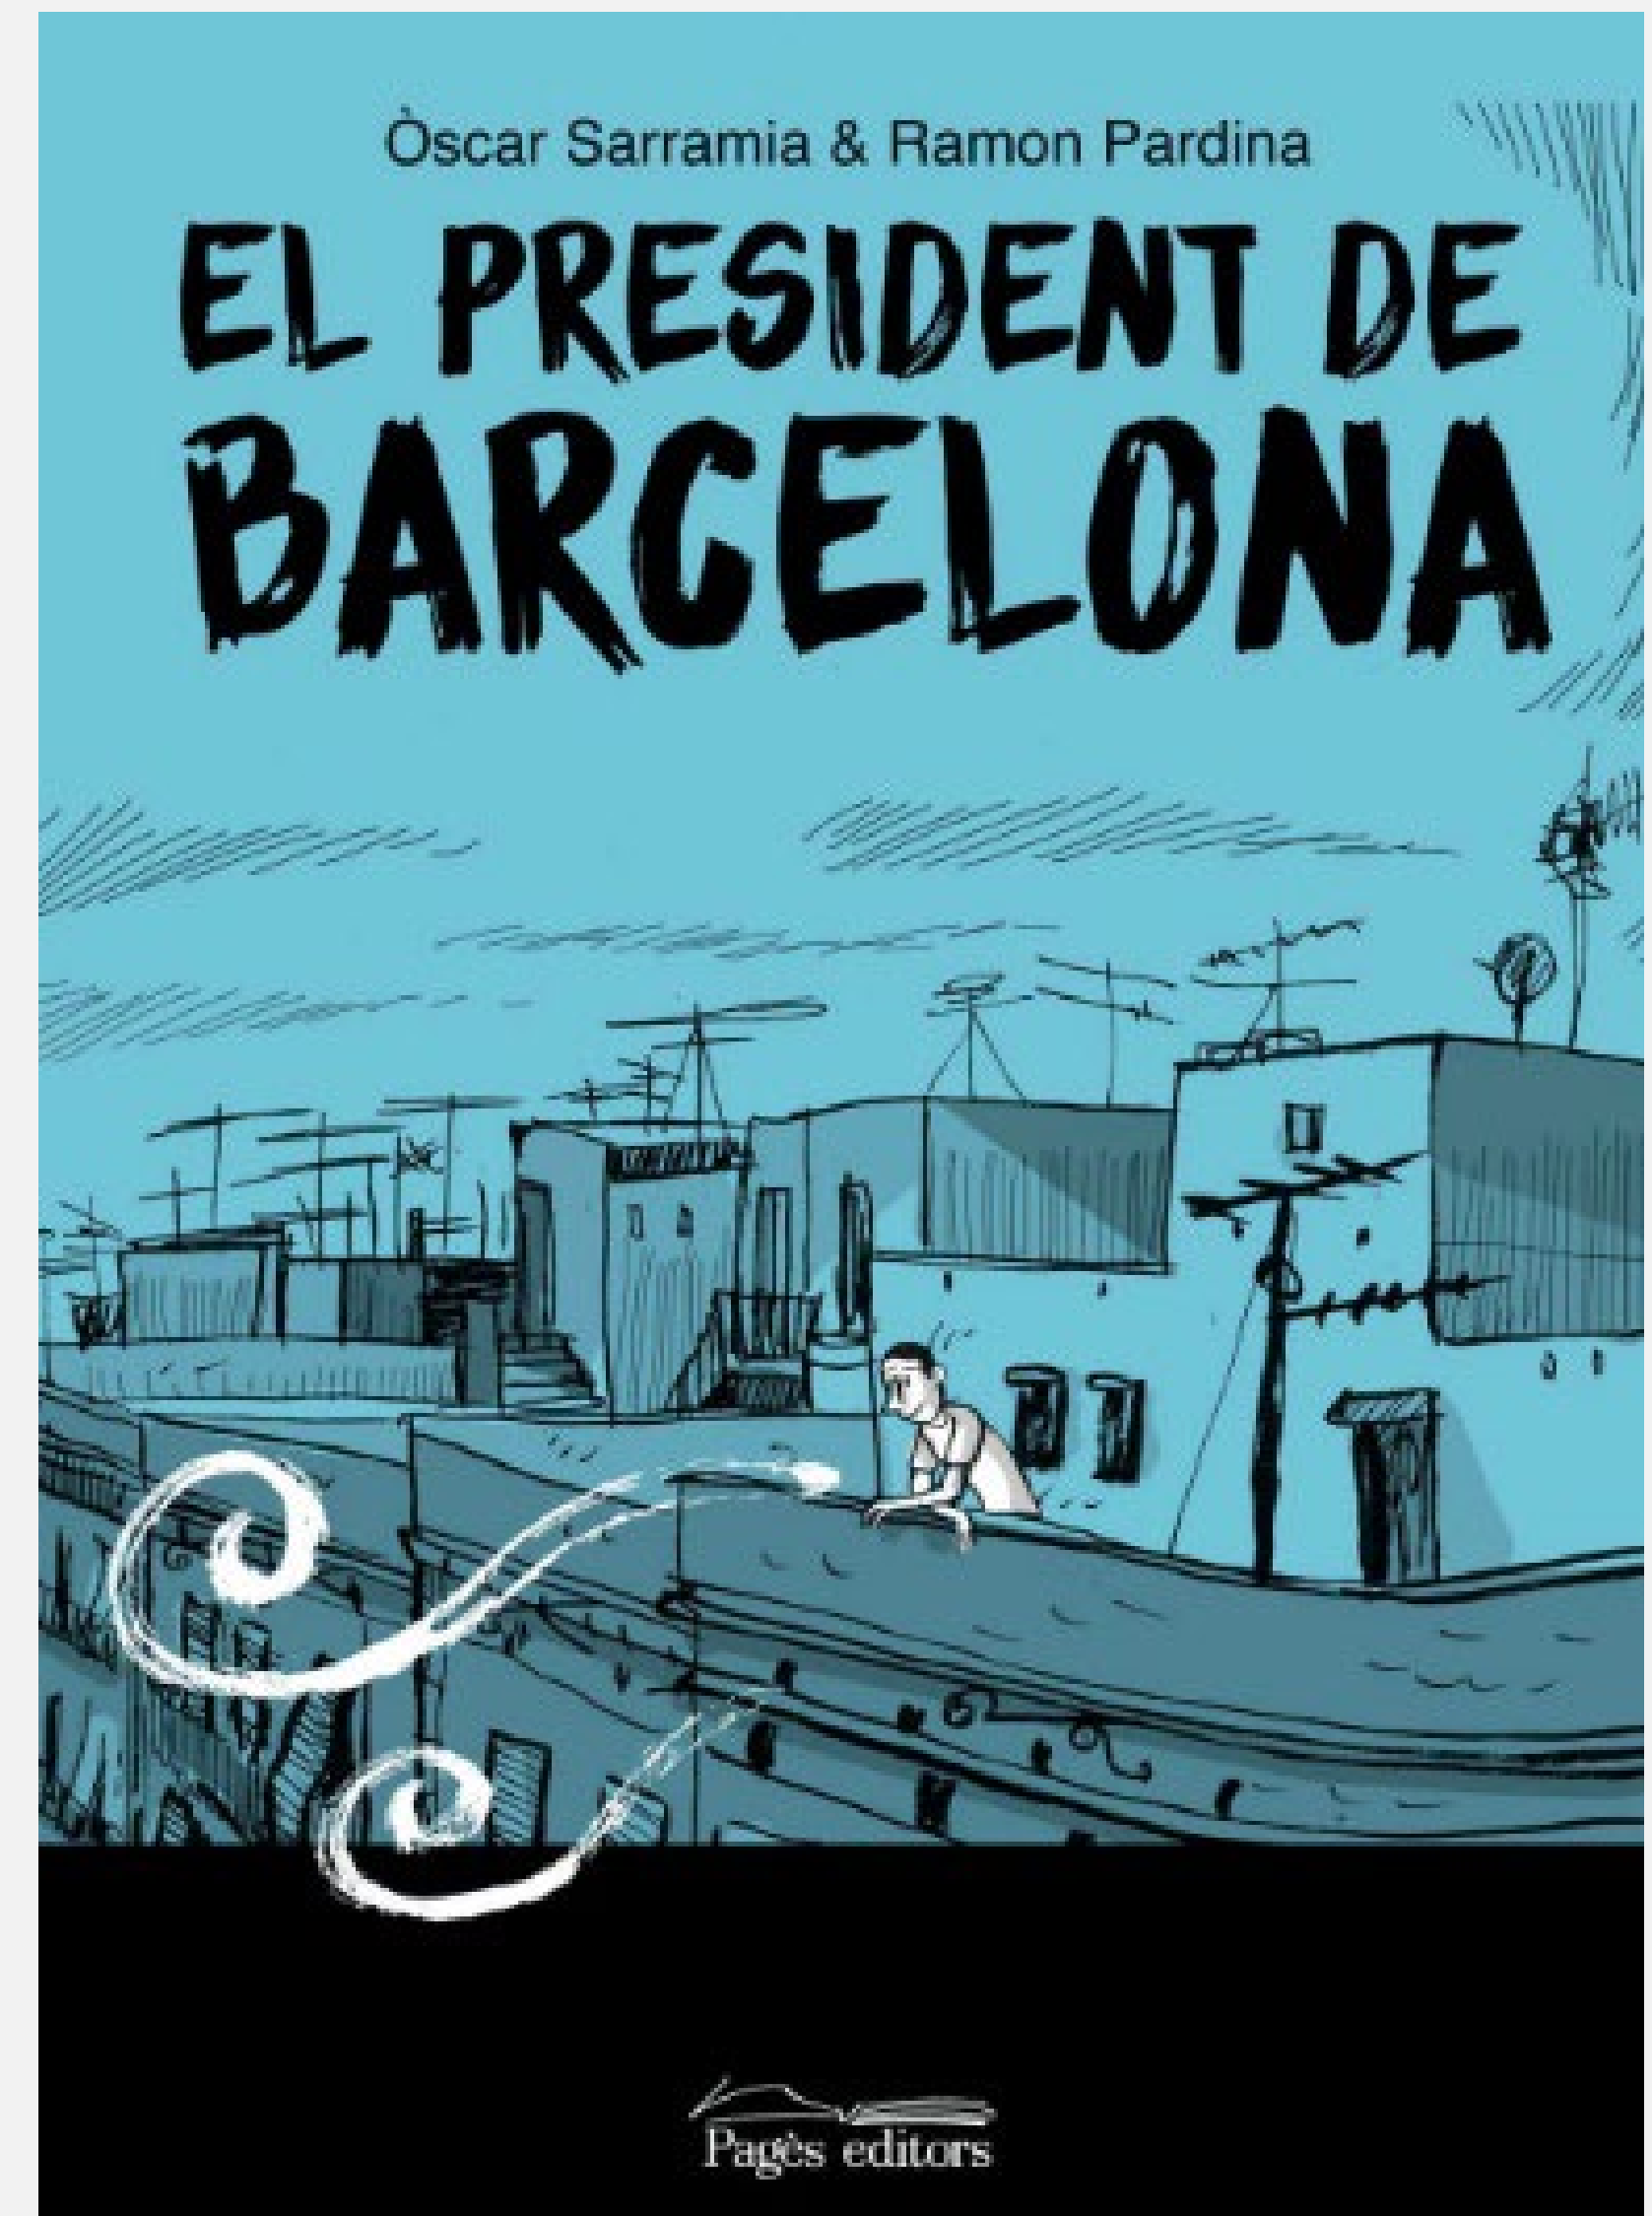

In the stairwell of a building in downtown Barcelona, multiculturalism stops being a concept and becomes a reality.

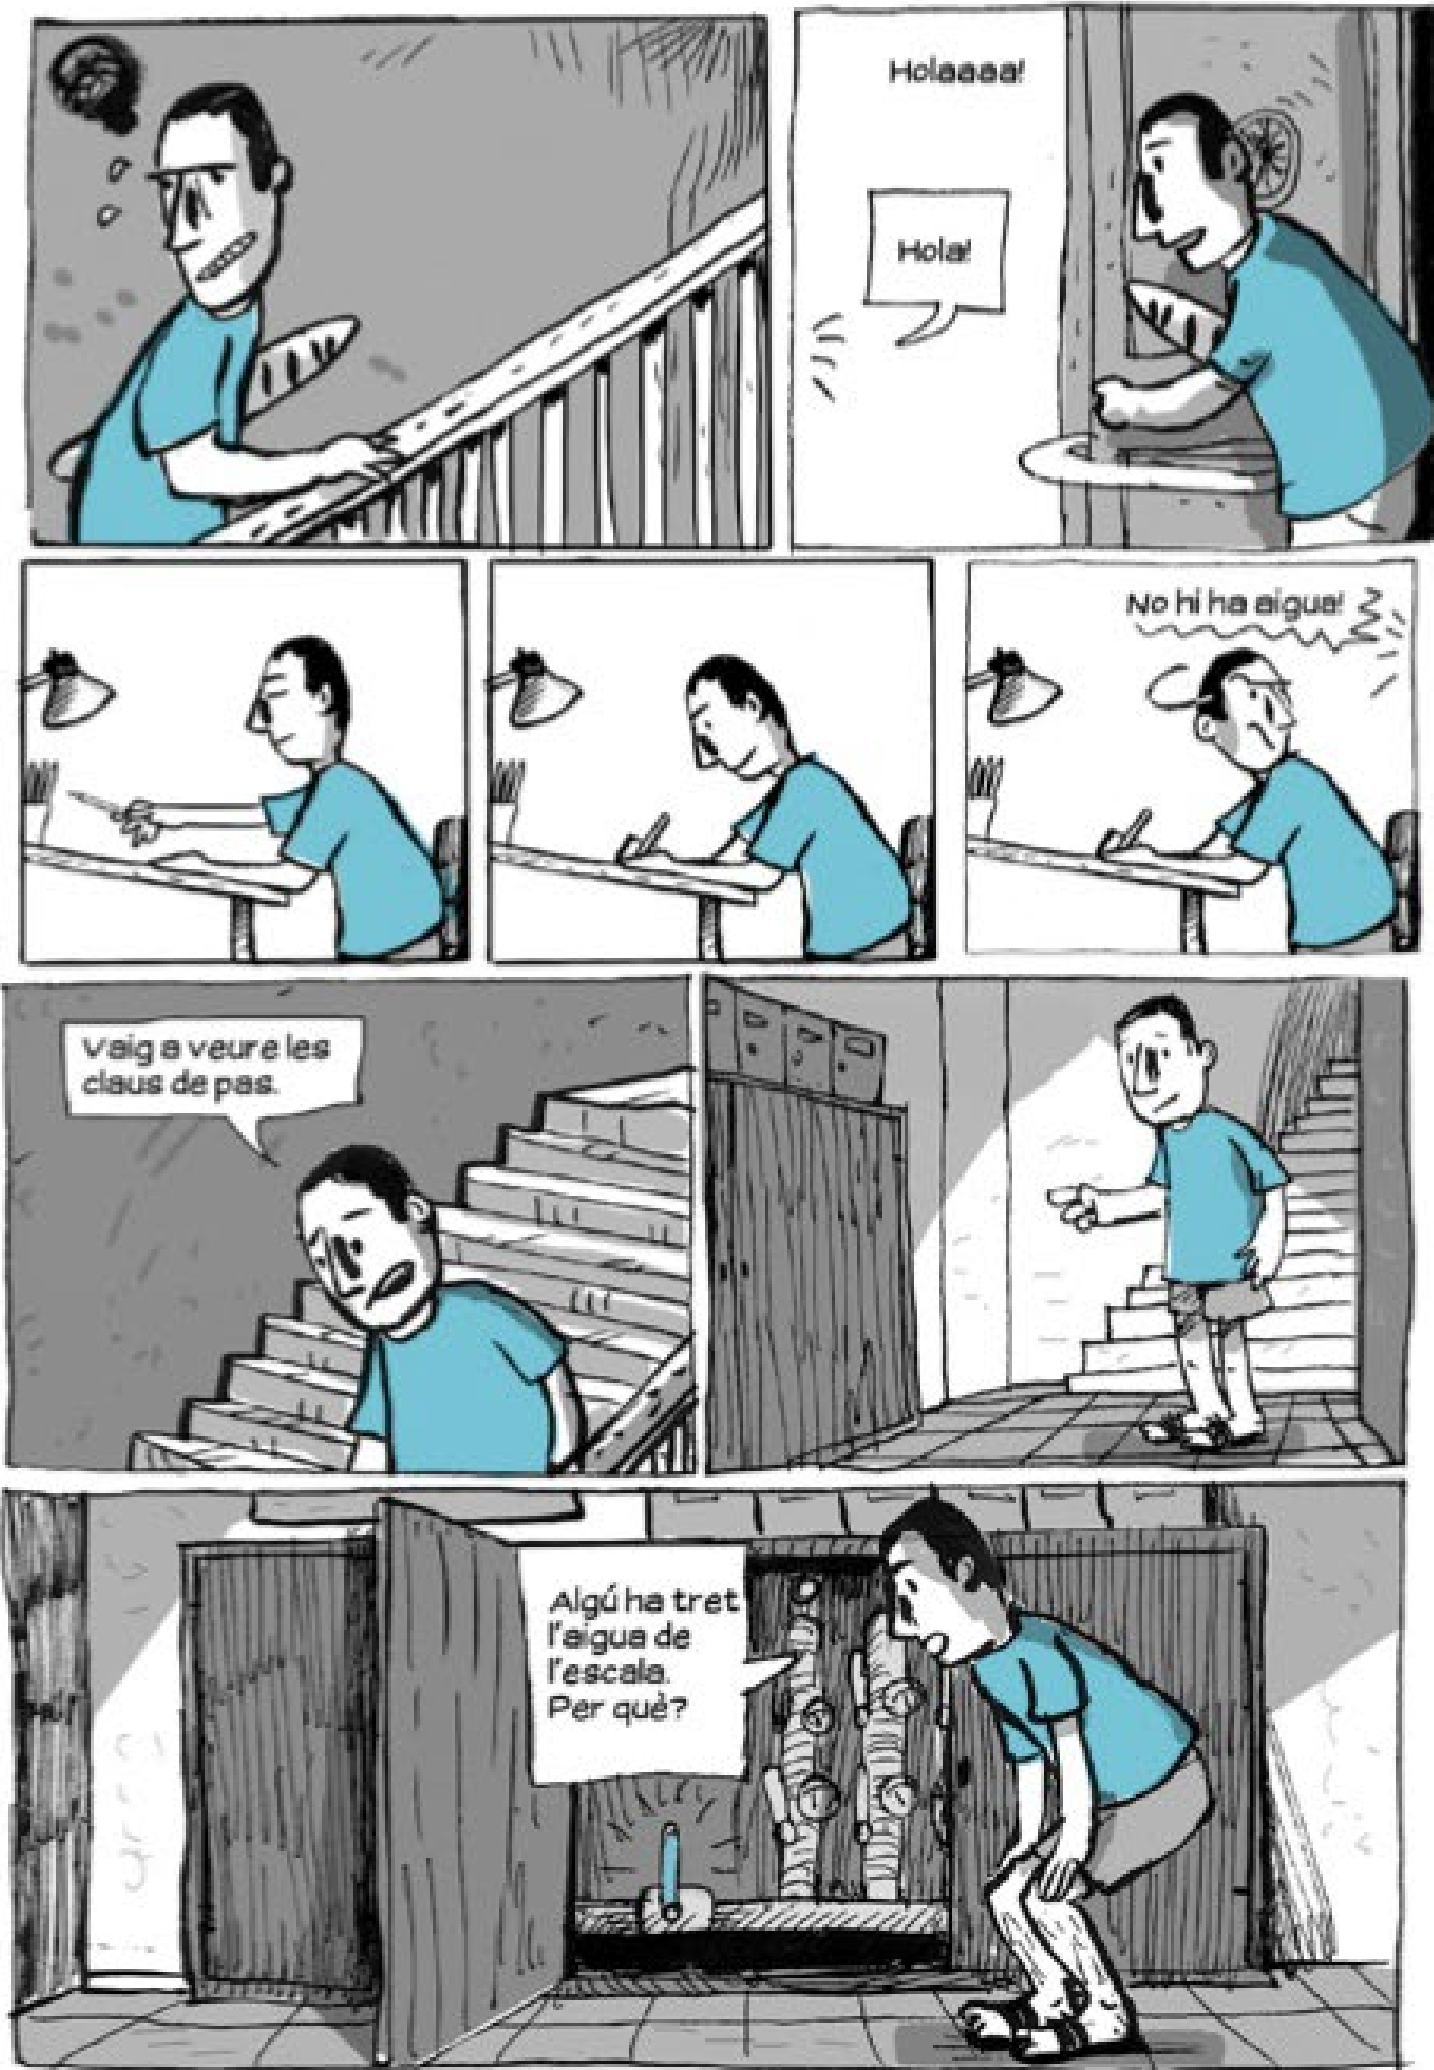

Newcomer Ramon, good-hearted and idealistic, suddenly finds himself appointed as the building manager, which in the eyes of the eclectic residents makes him quite literally the “boss” of Barcelona.

Between their incessant requests, quarrels, prejudices, he is soon pulled into a whirlwind of conflicts and unexpected moments of solidarity. How do you work from home or start a family in a chaotic place like this, where tourist apartments coexist with drug flats and new waves of migrants mix with long-time locals?

Julia and the emptiness

CLÀUDIA CEDÓ & NONO MORENO

An honest and poetic account of a couple confronted with perinatal death.

A young couple eagerly awaits the arrival of their first baby, but an unexpected pain sends Julia, now five months pregnant, to the doctor's office. A few days later, they are told that the baby will not survive.

Their story of resilience becomes a cartography of one of the most profound traumas: giving birth to a stillborn child, facing death when they were expecting life, and then trying to make sense of it all. Ultimately, they discover hidden reserves of strength within themselves, even when one feels immensely empty inside.

Now that life has gone by

ÁNGEL DE LA CALLE, JORDI SEMPÈRE & ANA MARÍA RUIZ

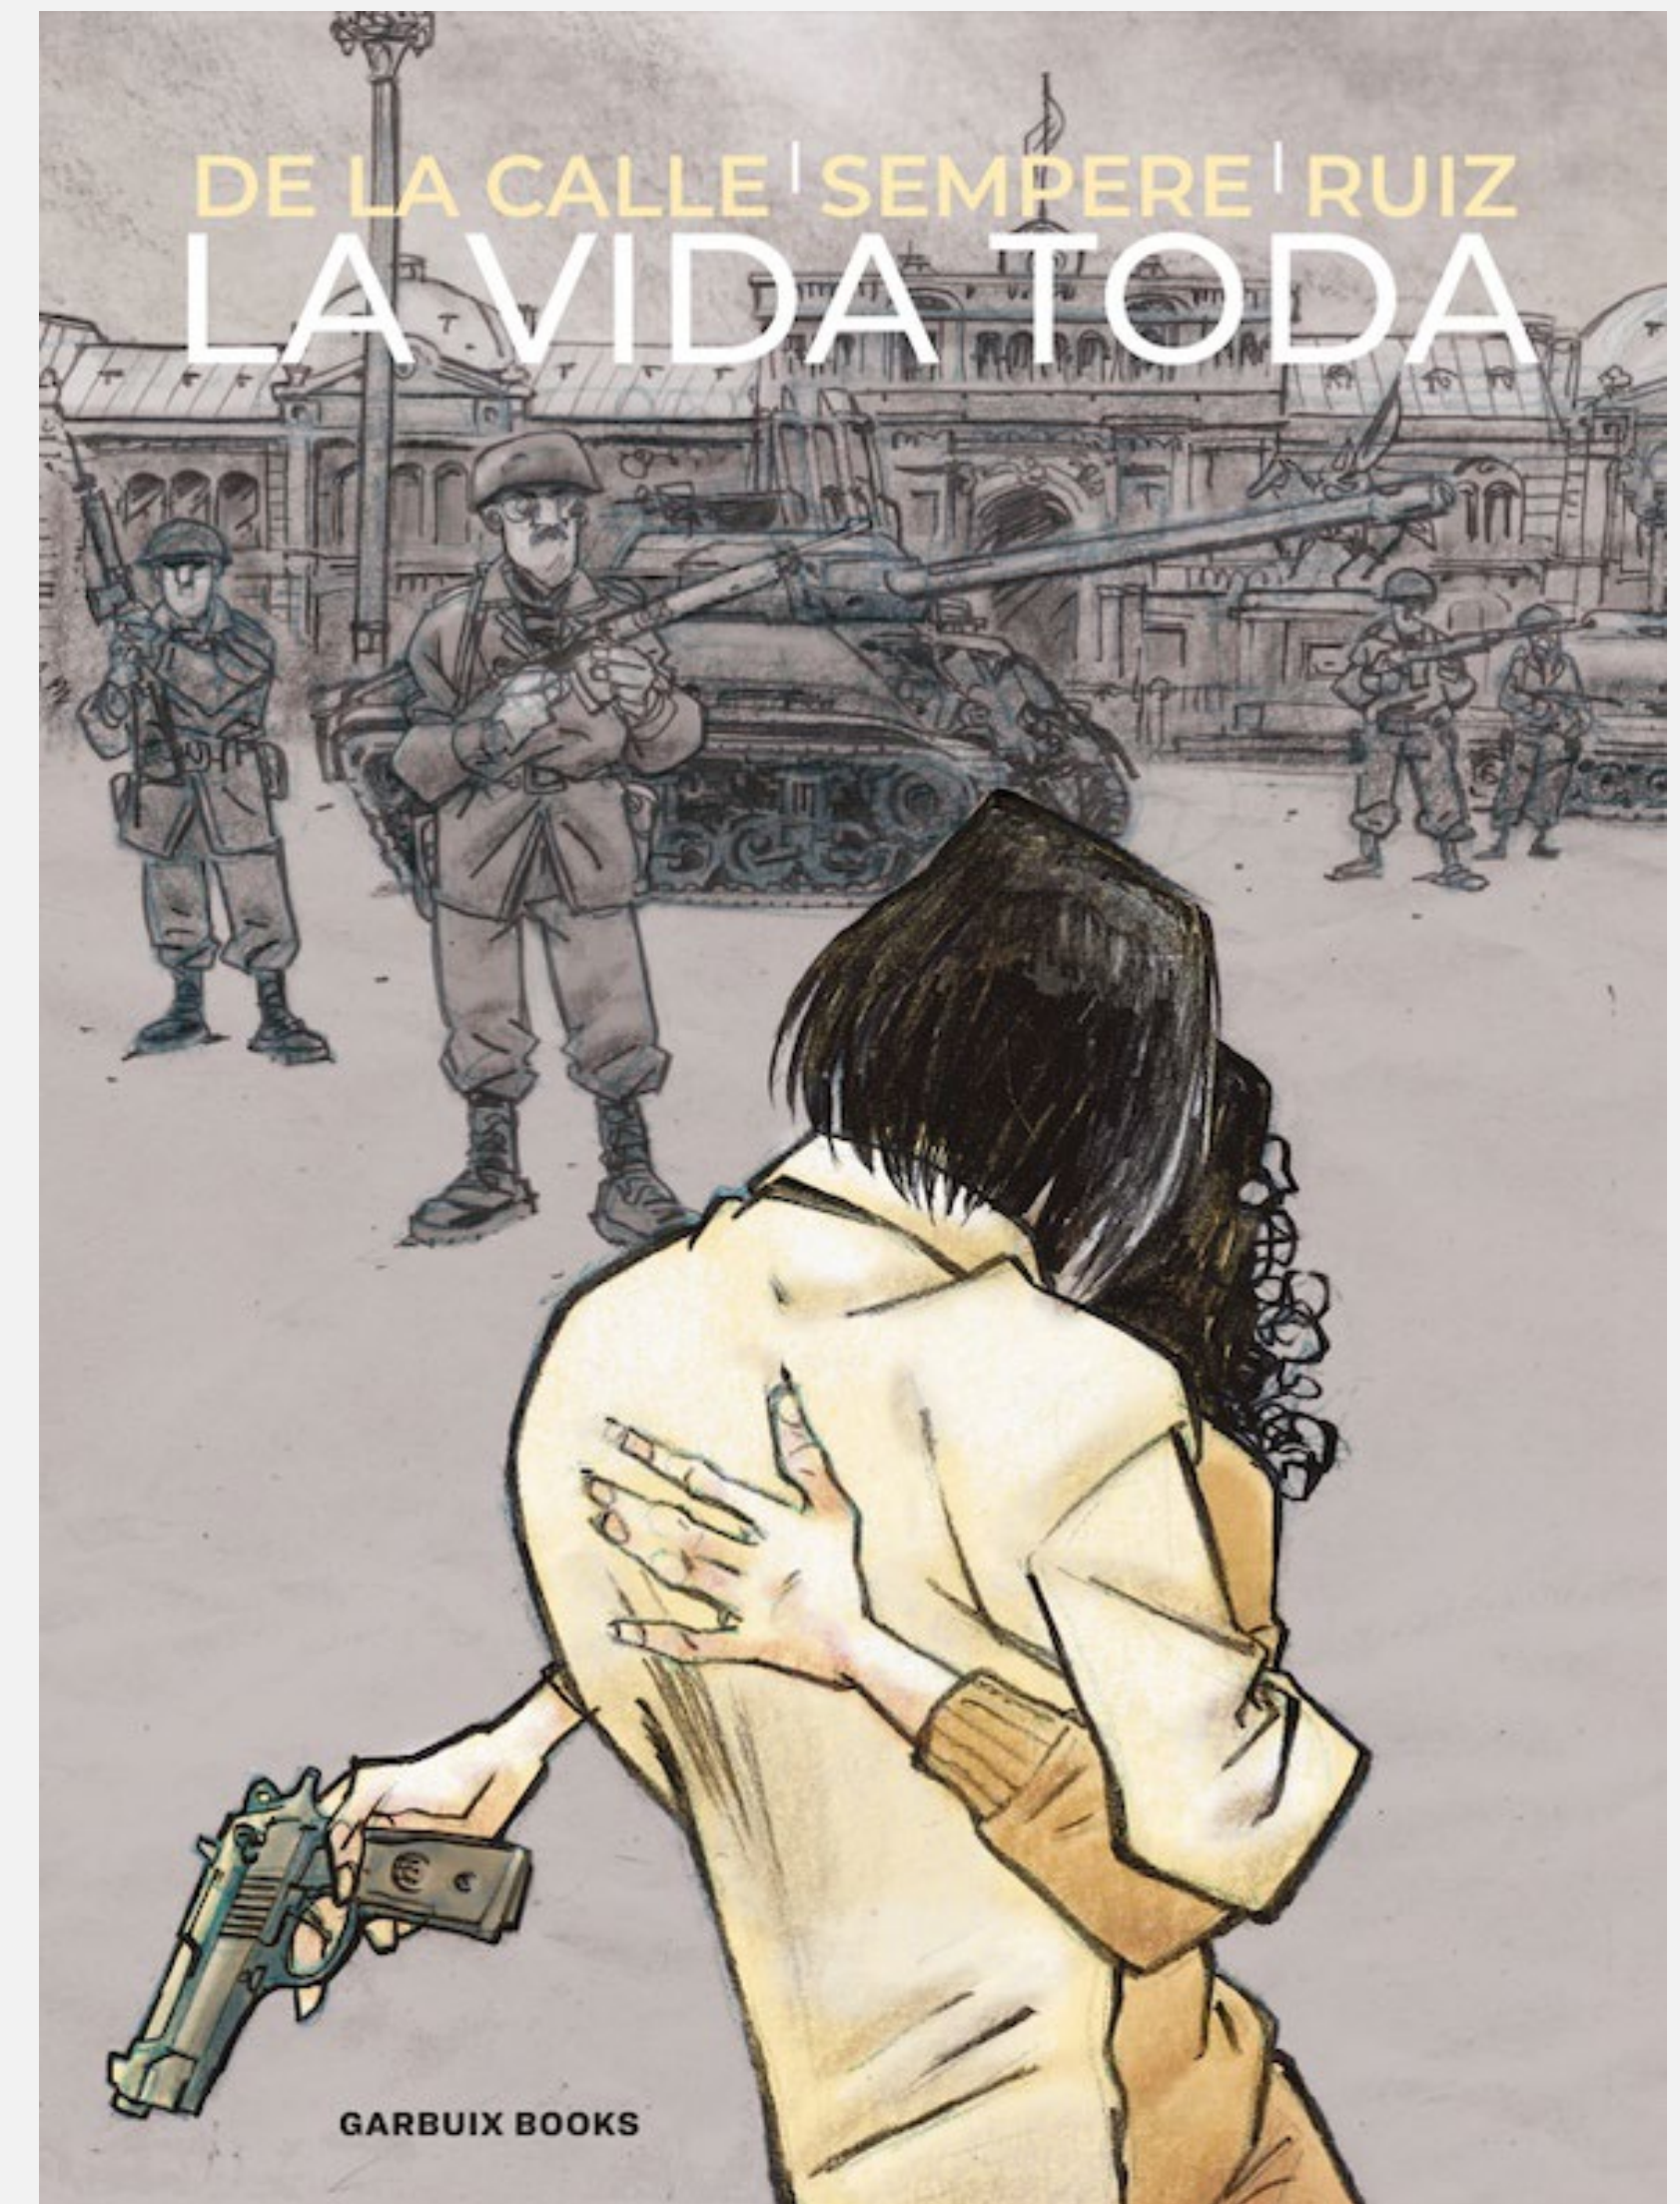

Unexpected fatherhood forces an Argentine psychiatrist, exiled in Paris from the military dictatorship, to confront open wounds.

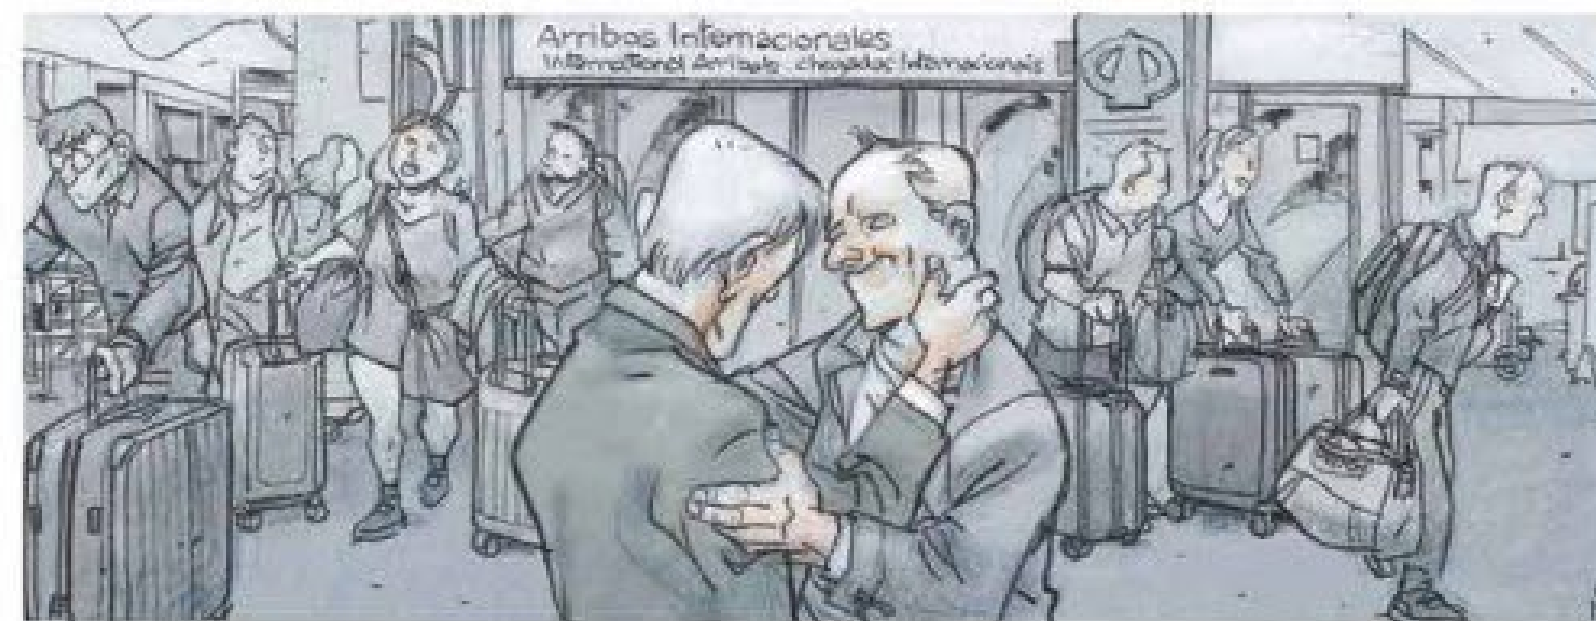

When Daniel receives a call from the National Bank of Genetic Data in Buenos Aires, he believes the body of his sister has been found. Like many others, she disappeared without a trace during the Dirty War led by the Videla dictatorship, the same regime he fled when he escaped to Europe. There has indeed been a DNA match, but it is his daughter who has been located, and she is very much alive.

The problem is that Daniel never had children with any of his partners. And so, after twenty-five years of absence, Daniel returns to Buenos Aires to set right what he believes to be an administrative mistake. Or could it be that his last girlfriend in Argentina, Claudia, a far-left revolutionary guerrilla activist, kept this a secret?

Waiting for the wolf

MARIO TRIGO

A graphic reportage on the wolf and its fragile relationship with humans, explored through its legacy in philosophy, cultural history, and fieldwork.

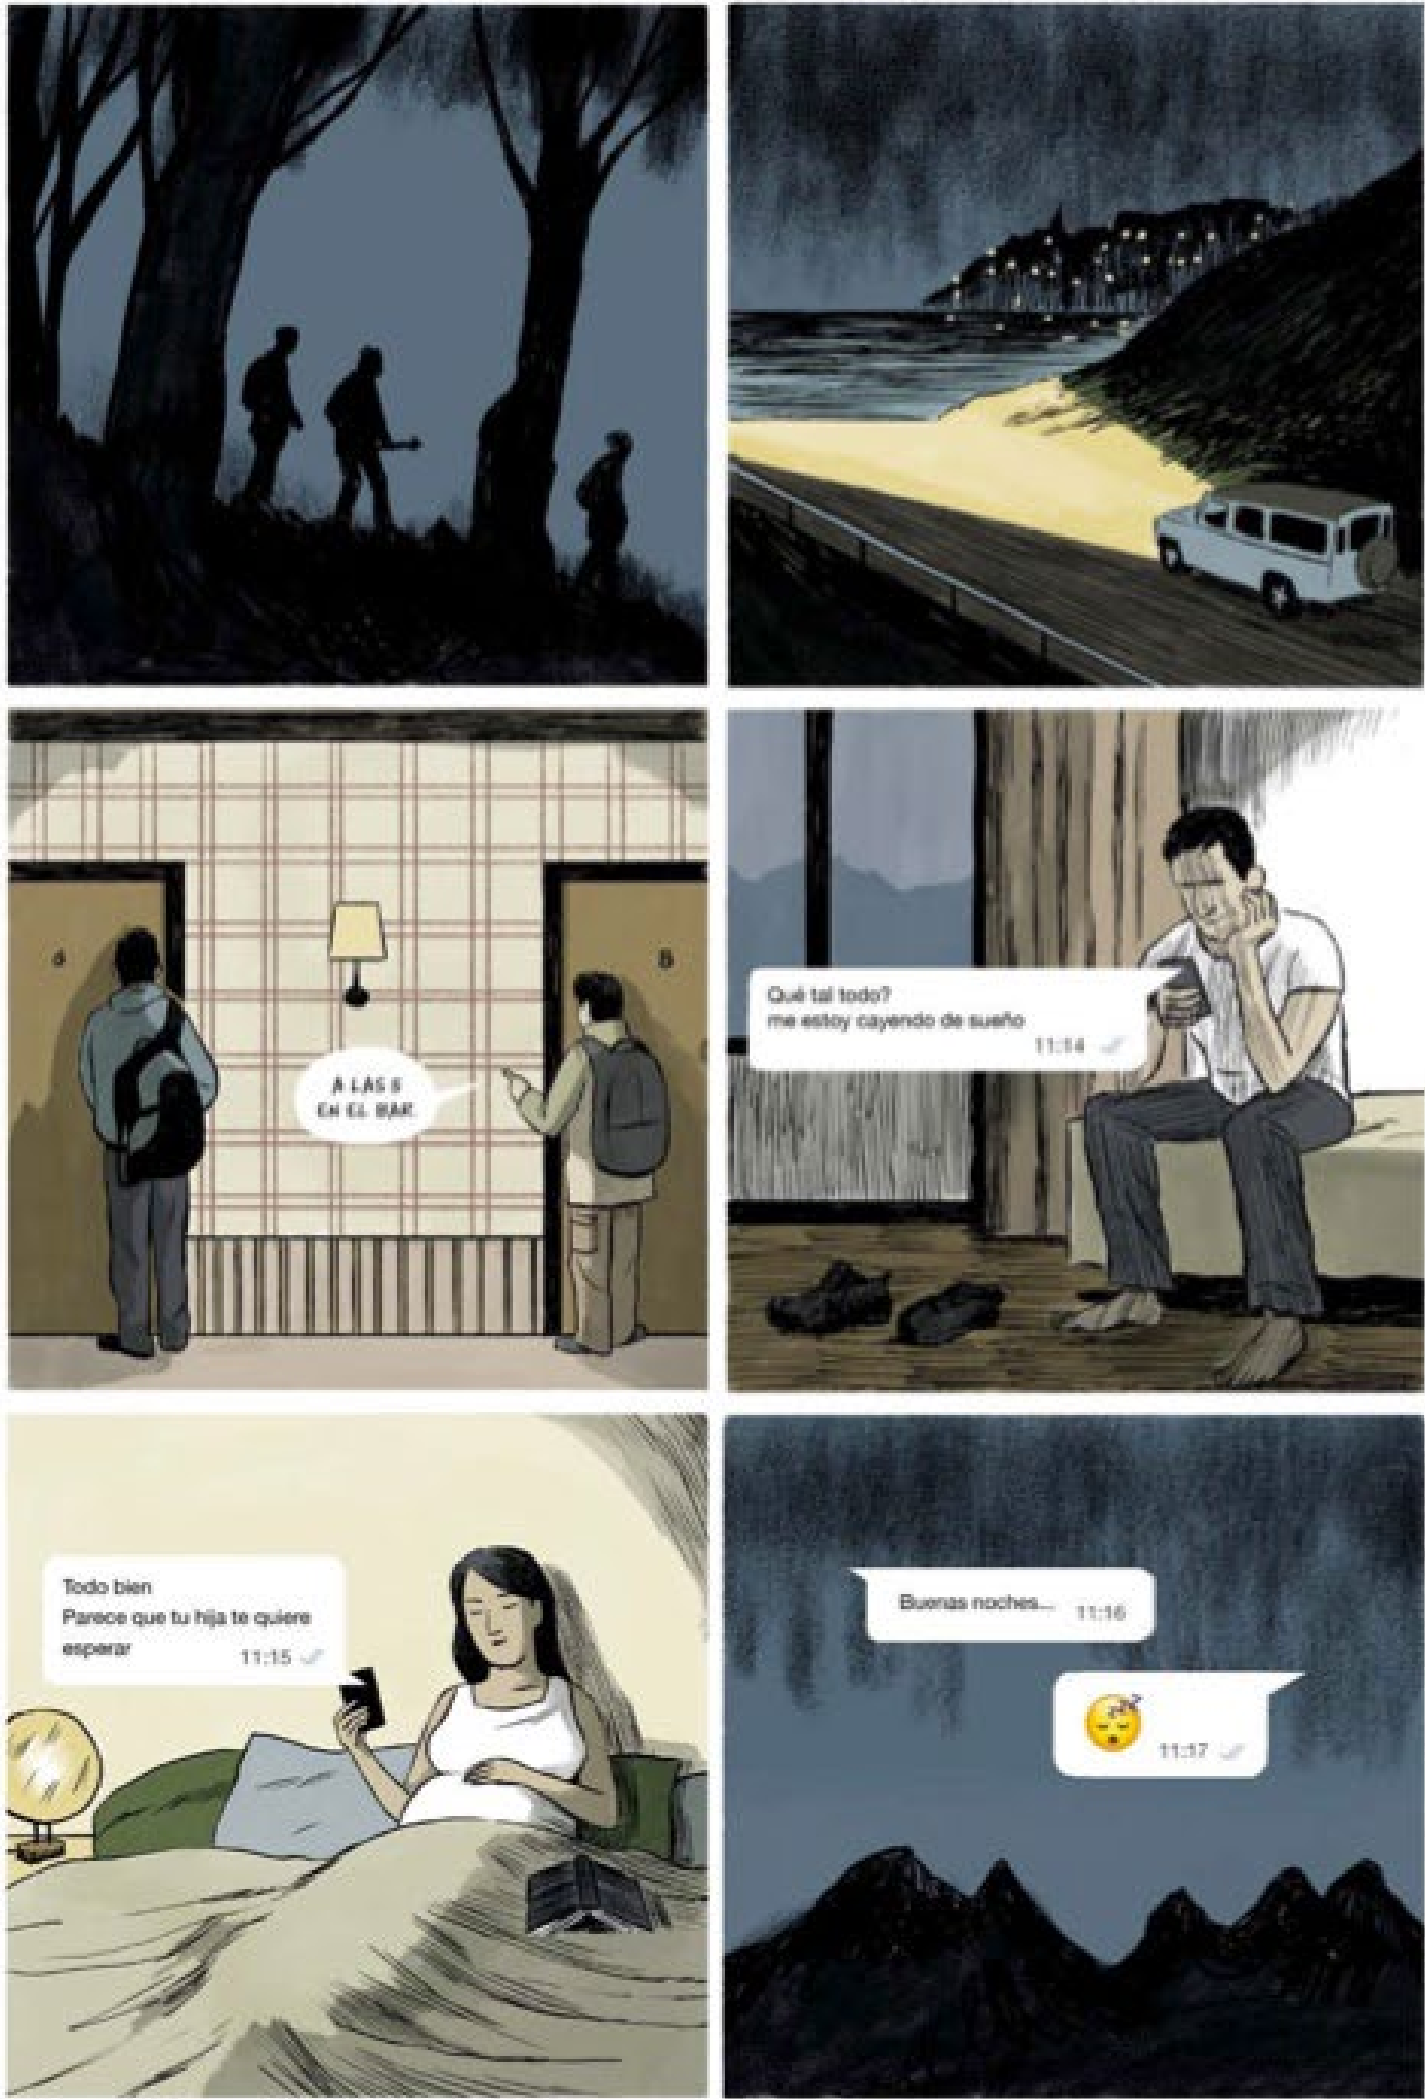

“To watch wolves in the wild is like falling in love,” says one of the characters in this comic. When the author travels to northern Spain with a wildlife observation agency to study wolves in their natural habitat, what begins as a simple assignment grows into a profound meditation on nature, fatherhood, and the act of waiting itself.

Why do we seek out other animals, and what do we hope to discover about ourselves in the process? Mario Trigo weaves together ecological debates, political tensions, and personal memoir to explore the fascination wolves have inspired in the human imagination throughout history, drawing on Seamus Heaney, Baptiste Morizot, Montaigne, and John Berger, as well as the Brothers Grimm, folk songs, ancient fables, and modern representations in movies and music.

The truth about Caridad del Rio

PEP BROCAL

Winner of the ARA Award for Non-Fiction Comics

A compelling portrait of a revolutionary woman and the many lives she led.

Best known as the woman behind Leon Trotsky's assassination, who was Caridad del Rio? A vibrant communist turned Soviet spy? The mother of five who later became the lover of a French aviator and KGB operative? An educated aristocrat who took up arms on the front lines of the Spanish Civil War? An idealistic dreamer or a cold-blooded mastermind?

Where rumor ends and fact begins is blurred in this biographical journey of an enigmatic woman who shaped the course of her time.

Concrete

JAUME VADELL

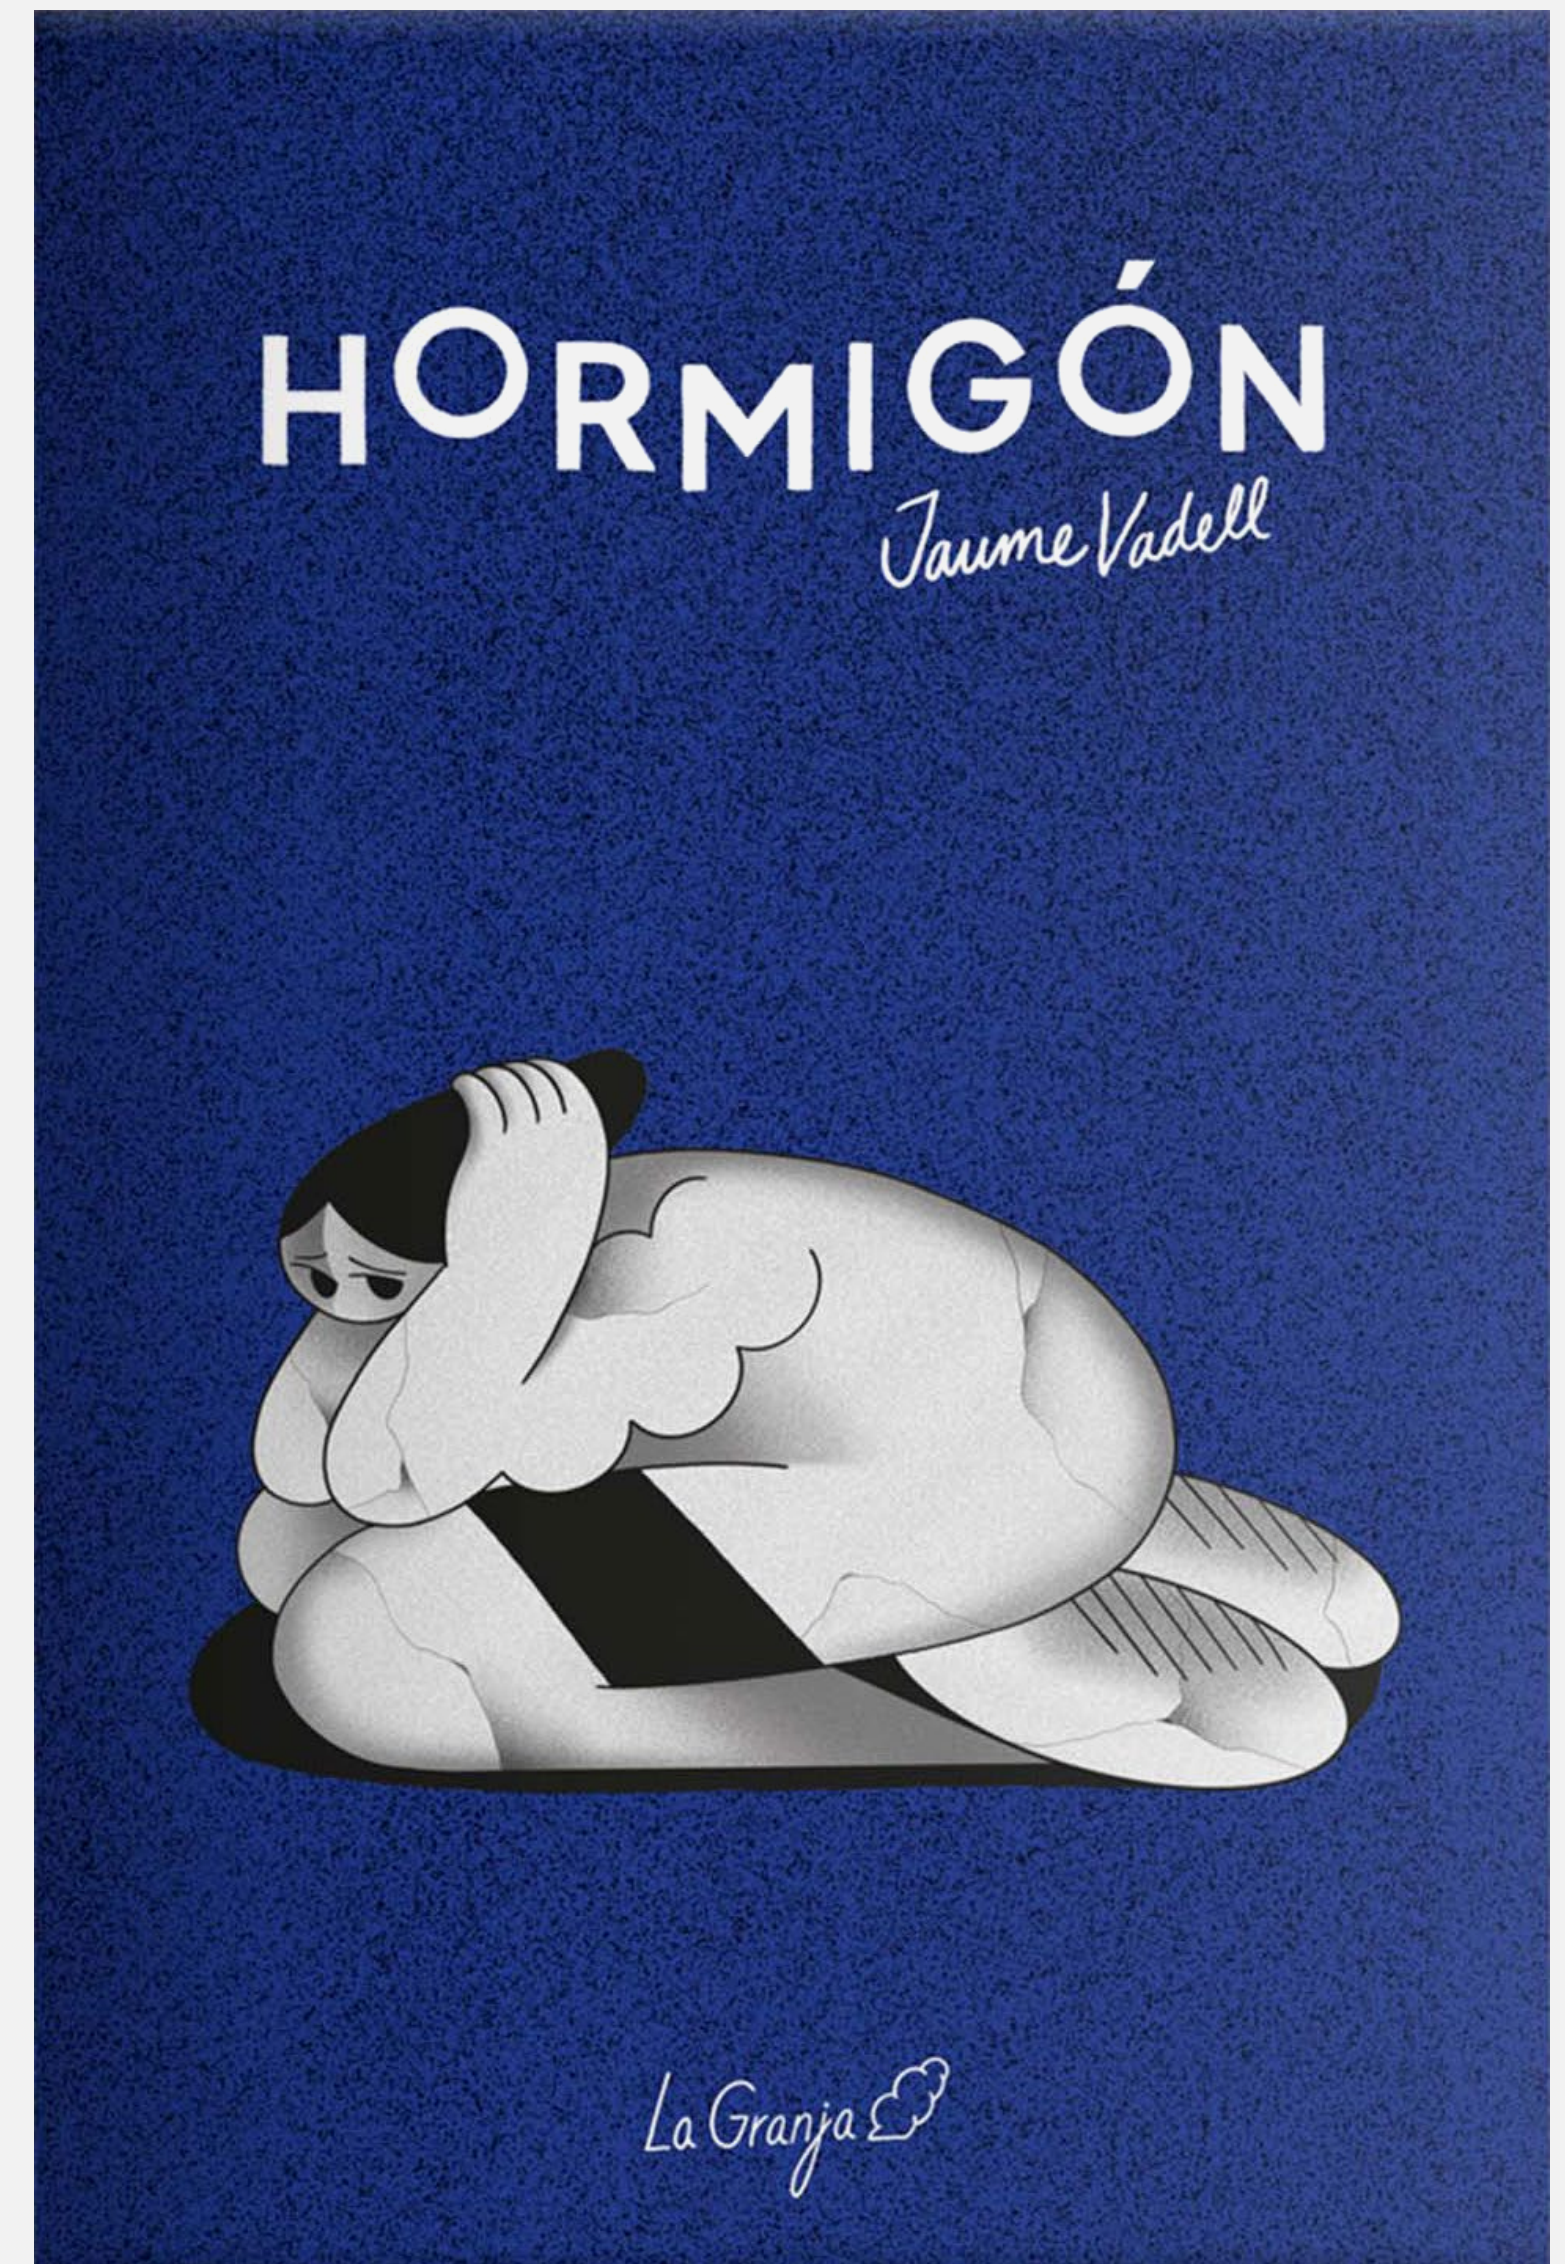

How can one shake off the feeling of heaviness that comes with anxiety?

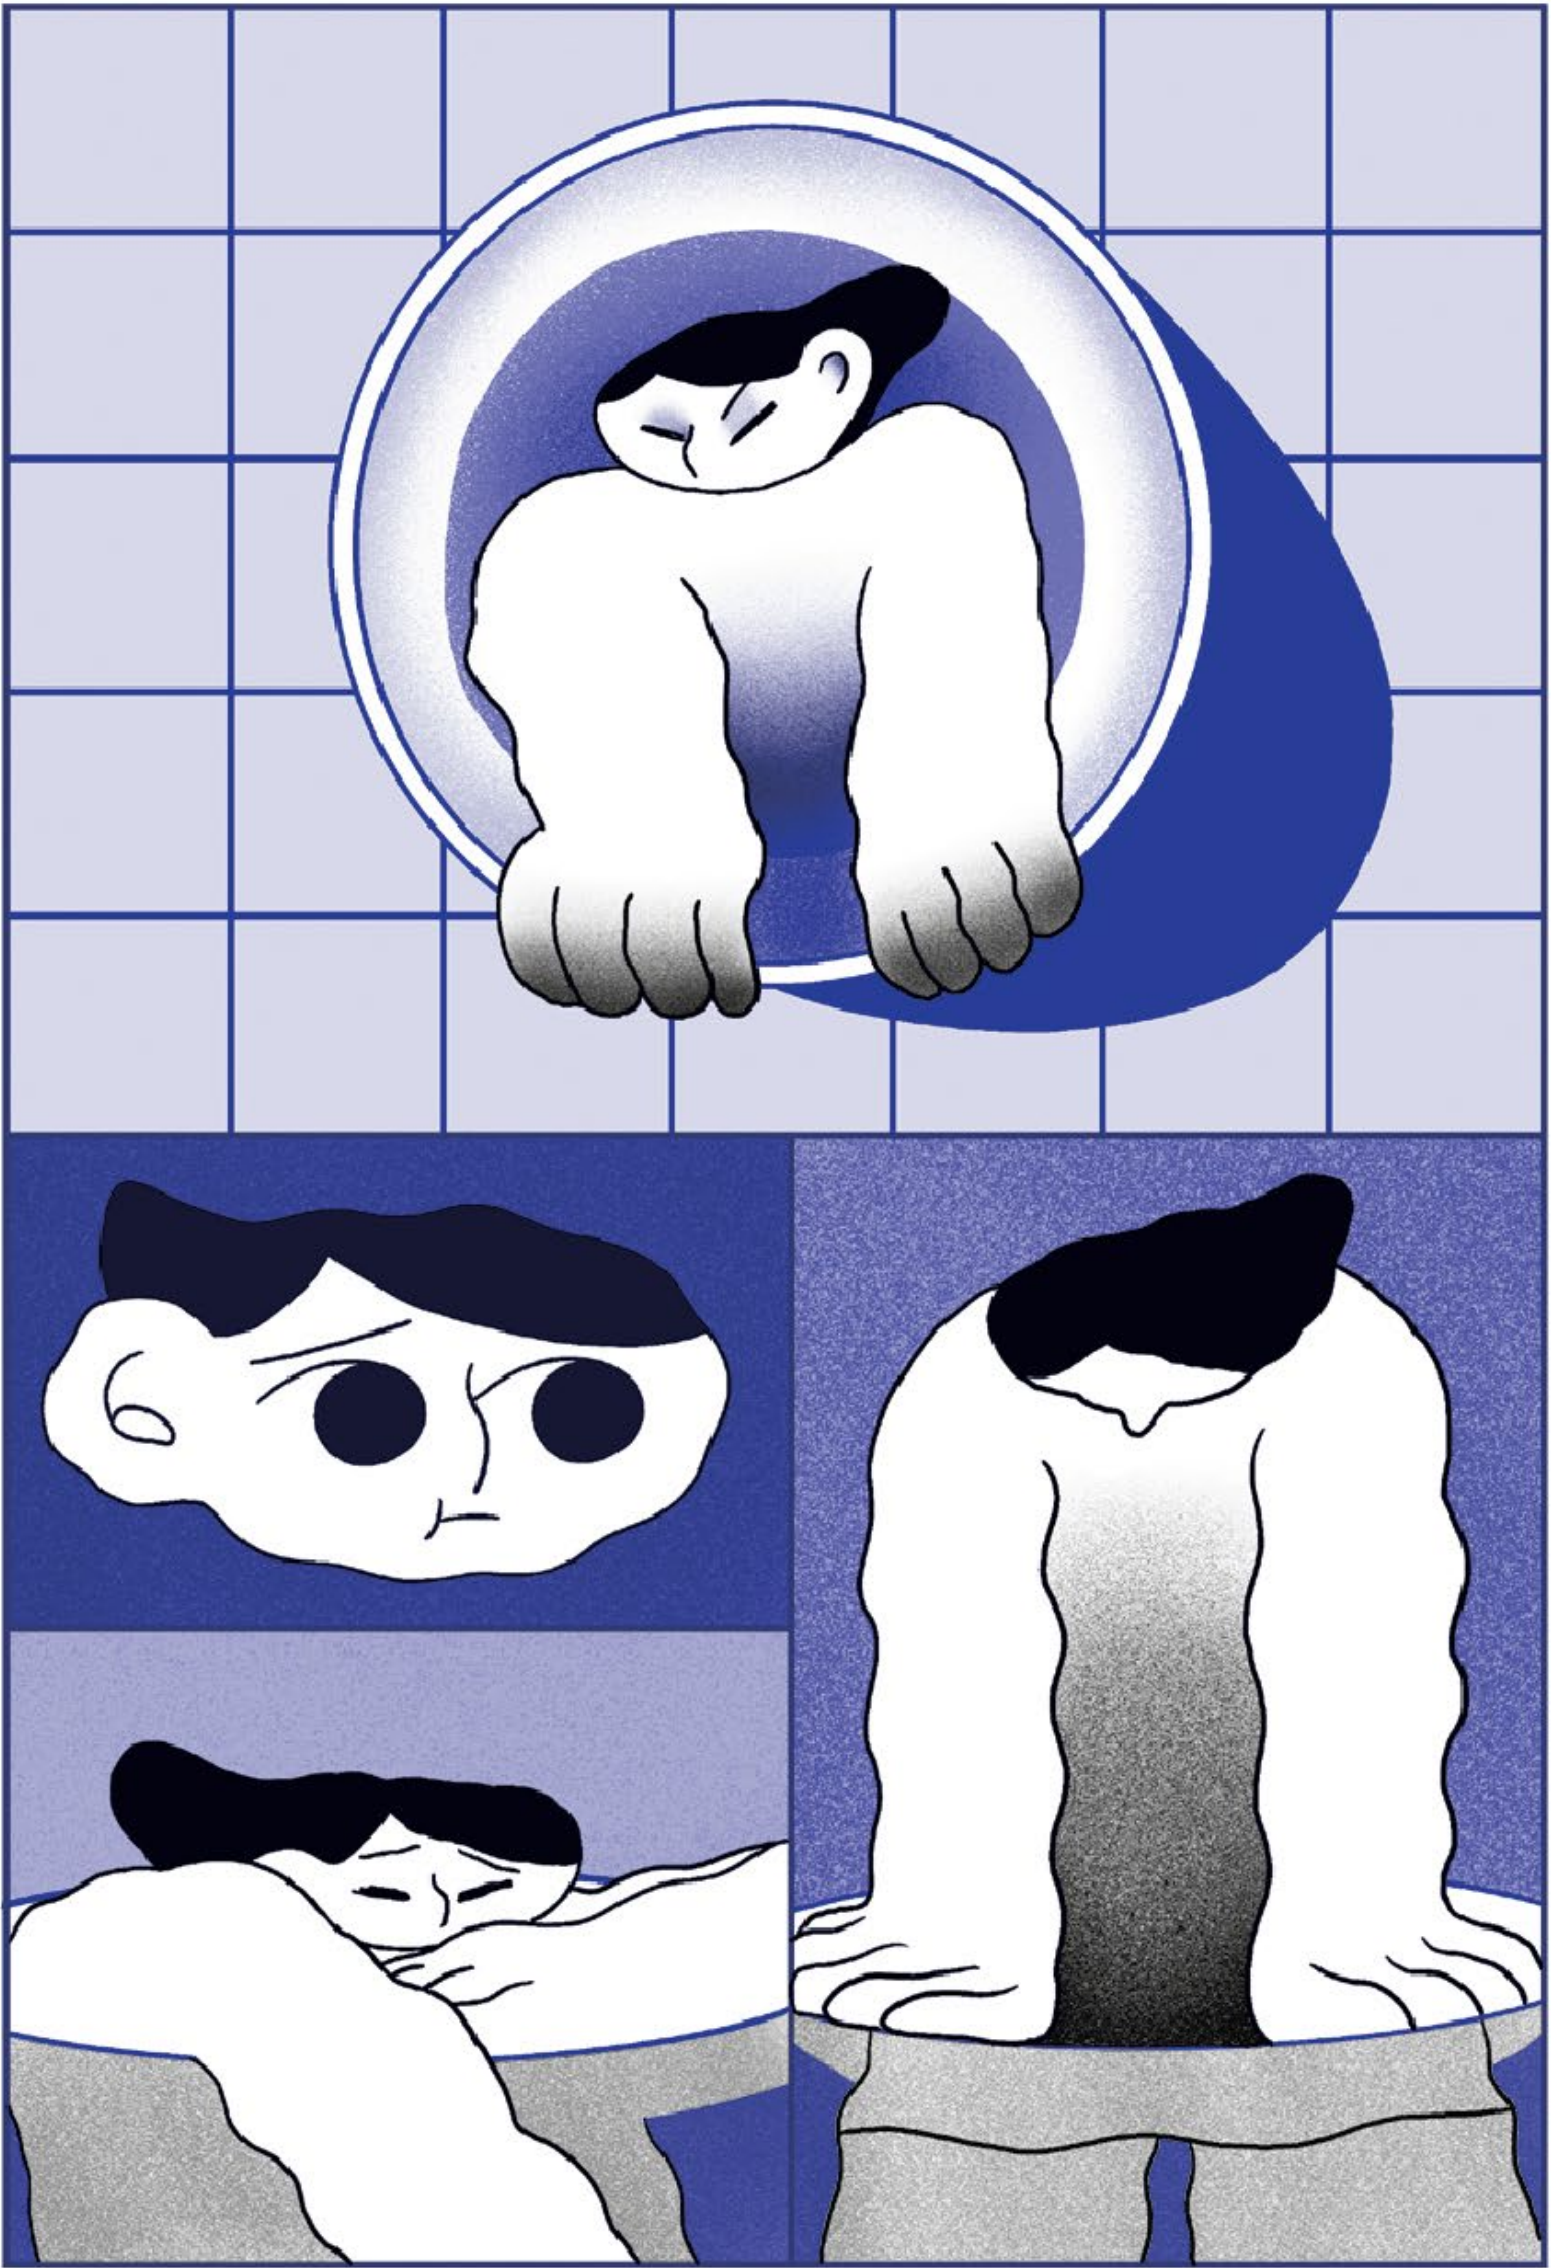

Clara feels as if she is turning into concrete. Heavy and immobile. Even simple tasks, like calling her mother, remembering which day to take out the trash, or showing up at work, feel impossible. Though she knows others are worried, she can't bring herself to act. Her body seems to deform and melt, shifting through surreal, fluid stages.

Through this strange transformation, she glimpses the struggles of those around her and realizes they, too, wrestle with anxiety and disconnection, whether it's her grounded mother or her self-confident boss. Gradually, the weight begins to lift, and movement and change start to feel possible again.

Loose Juice

PAW SALCÉS

A quirky graphic novel about burnout, isolation, and the healing power of friendship.

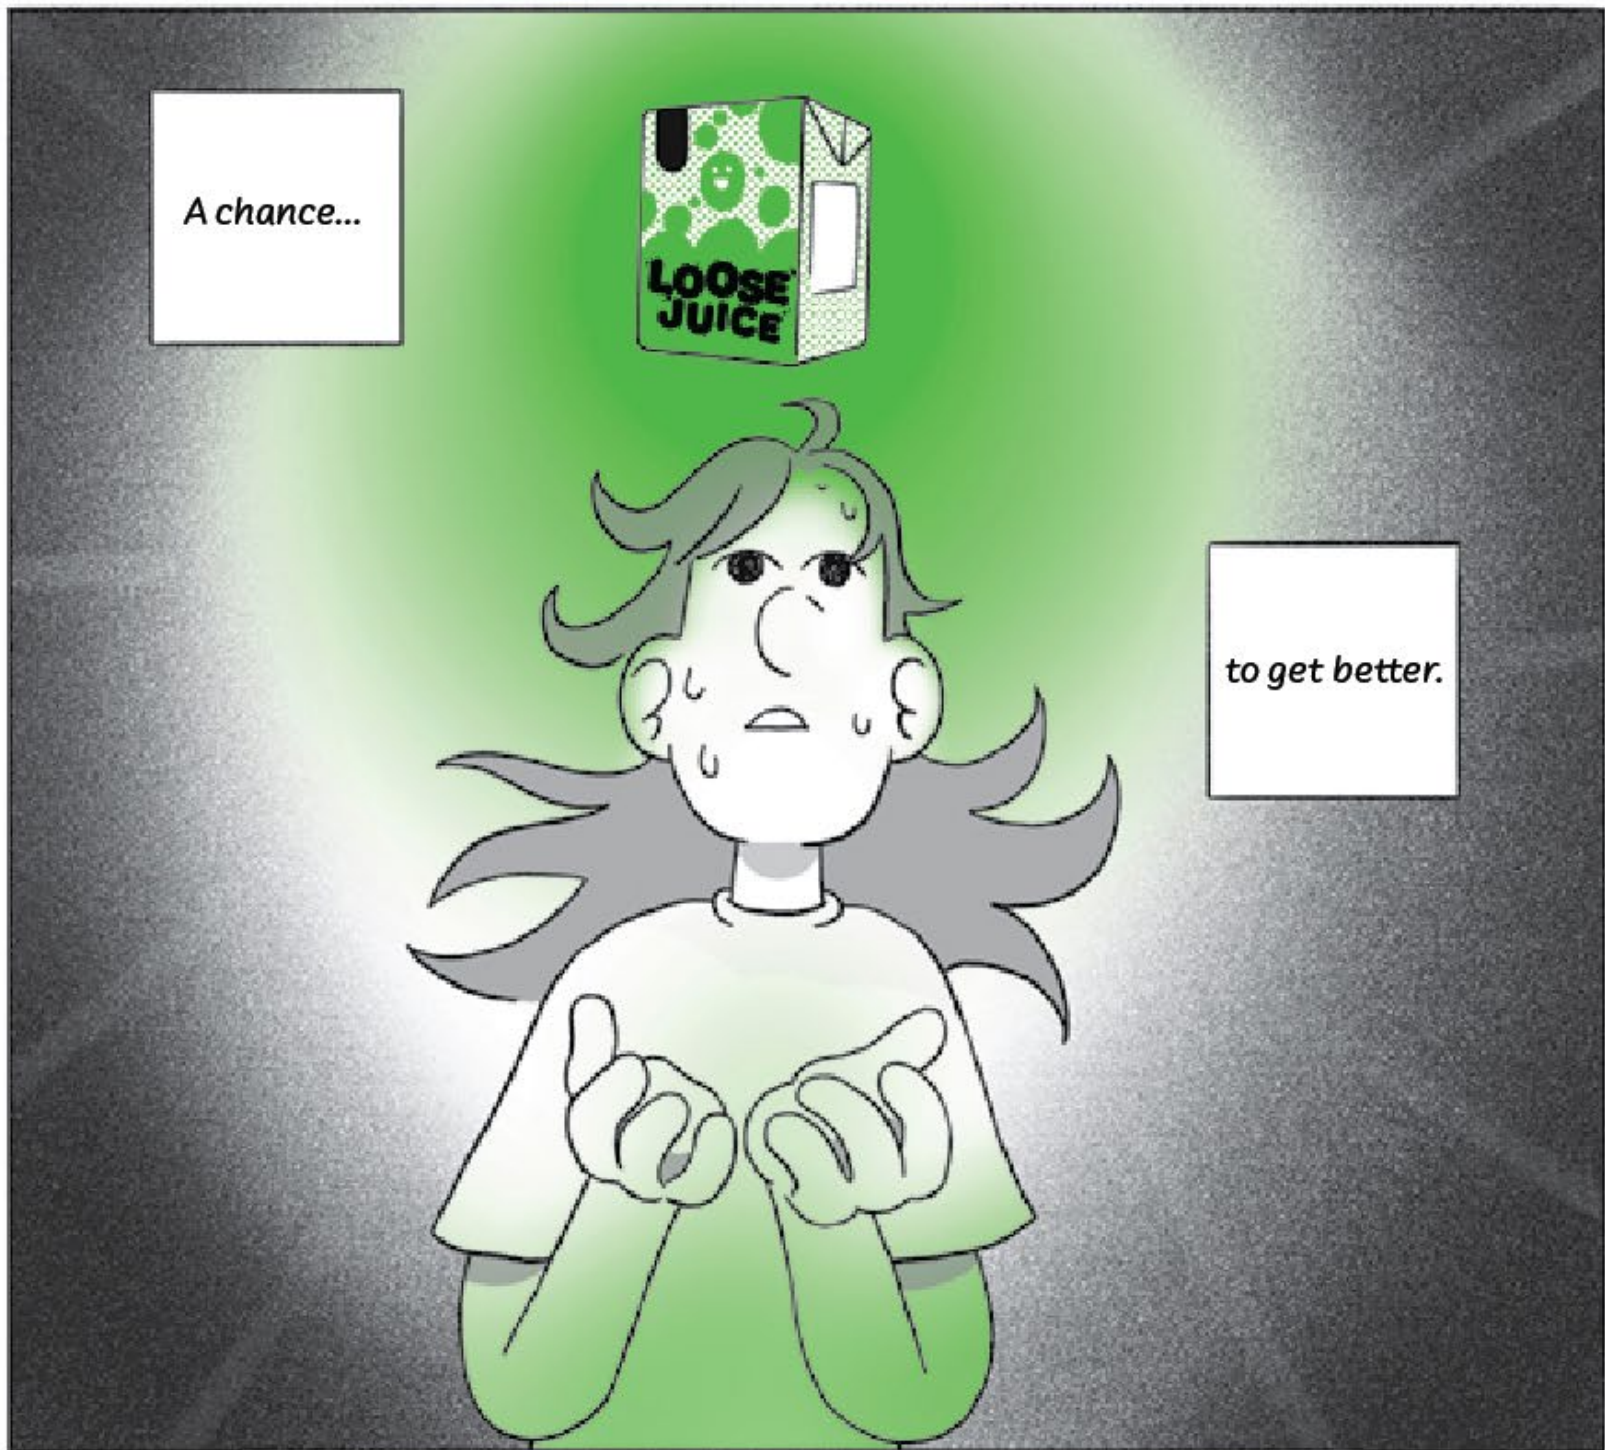

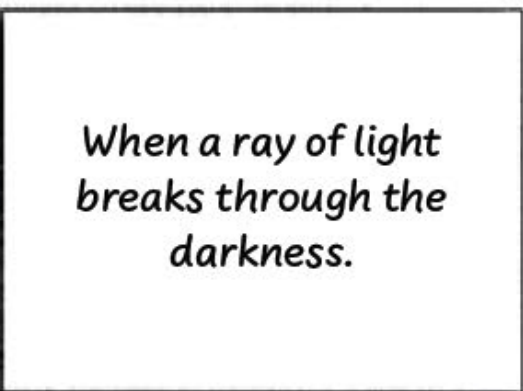

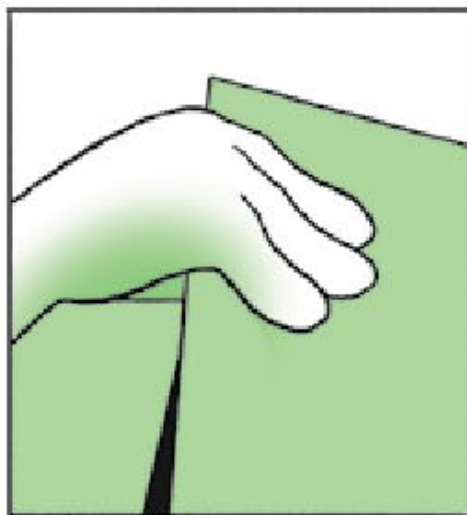

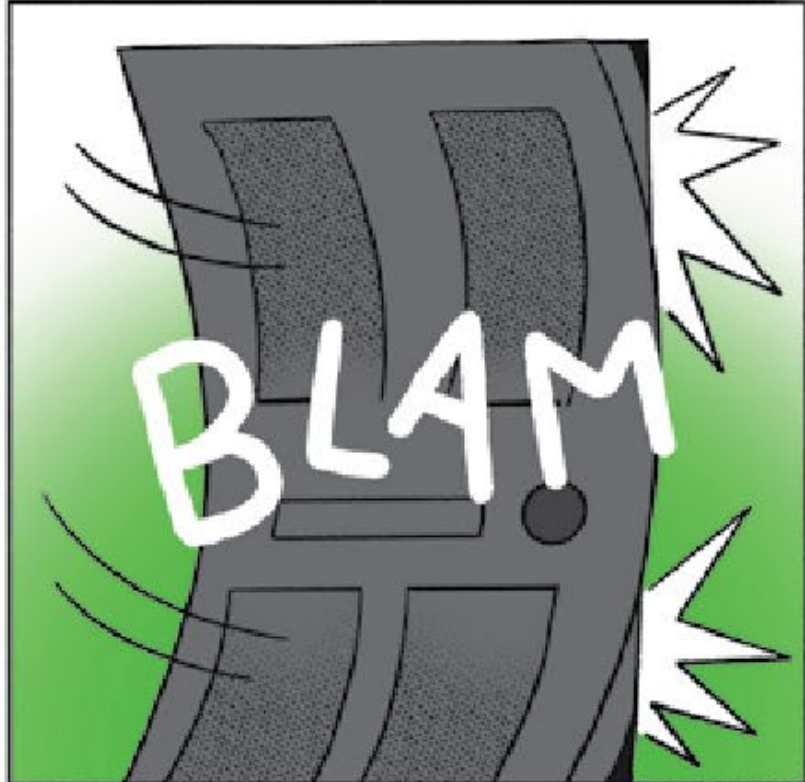

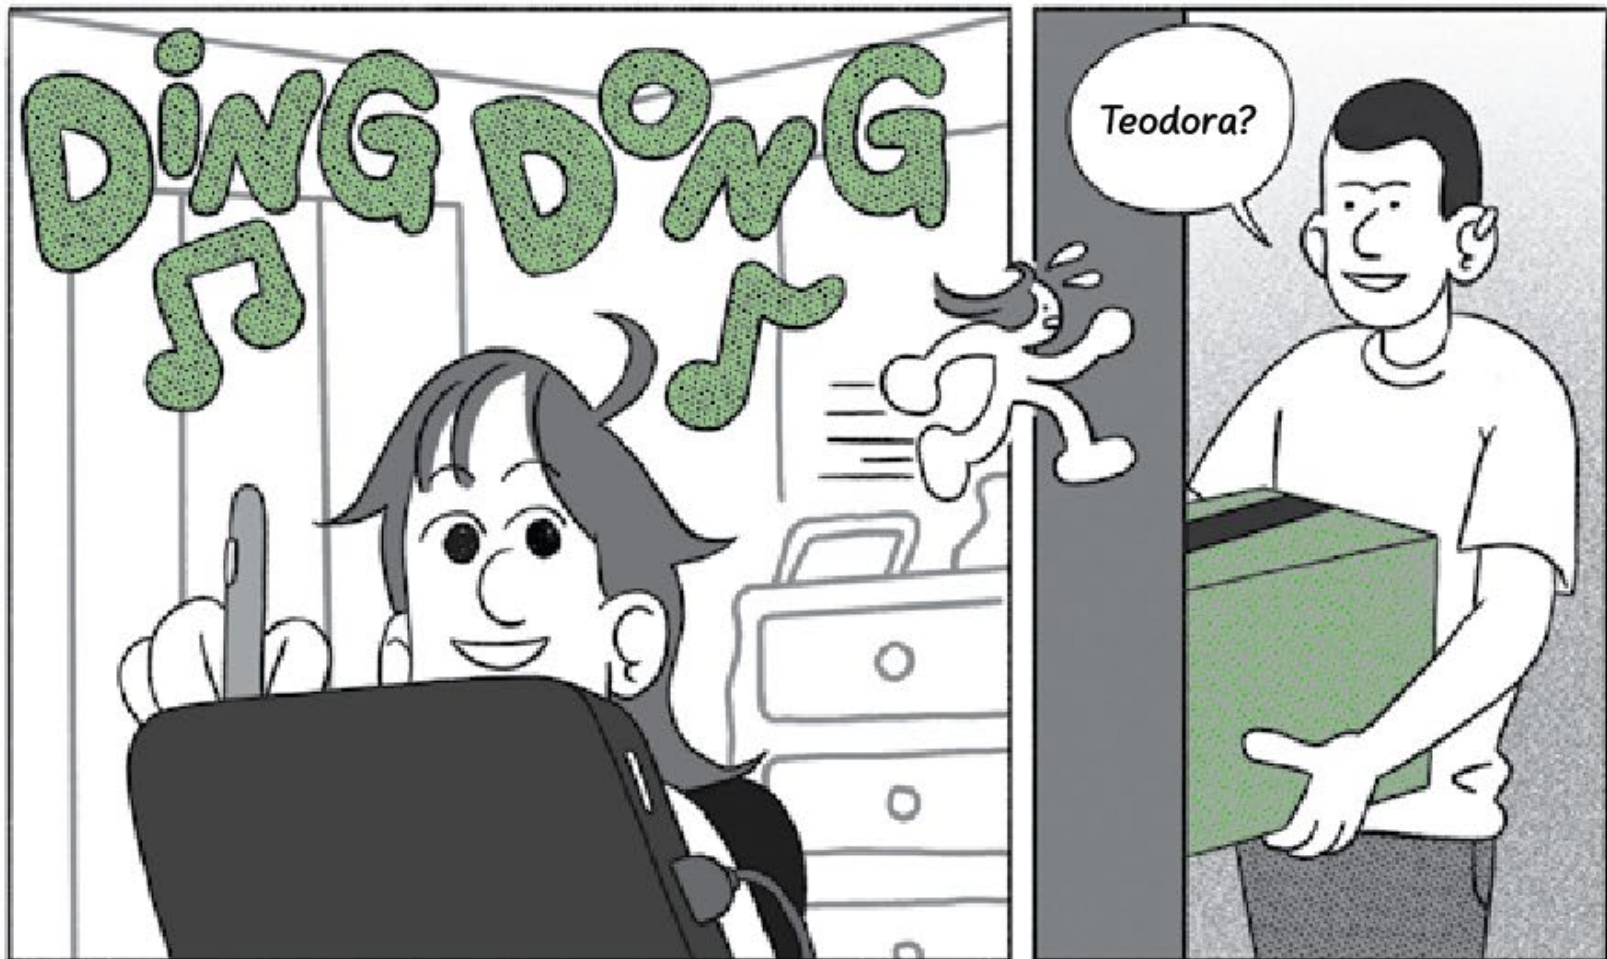

Fed up with miracle cures and empty slogans? Then don't download Teodora's latest app! The young game designer has created a relentlessly cheerful frog that floods the world with upbeat catchphrases and spiritual messages. While she brings joy and motivation to the app's users, Teo's own moral compass begins to sink.

Struggling with chronic intestinal issues, she has pushed her friends away, afraid of being judged. Grappling with hyper-productivity, stress, and social pressure, her sense of alienation only grows. Then a mysterious "wonder juice" hits the market, promising to solve both digestive and social problems in a single sip. Teo decides to take the plunge and at first, everything seems to fall into place. But as her dependence on the juice deepens, she begins to wonder: is it really helping or is it making things worse?

Dog Park

RUT PEDREÑO

Not just another walk in the park. This lyrical tale explores the fragile balance between absence and connection.

A boy sets out to walk his dog in the park. While playing, the dog suddenly vanishes without a trace. What begins as a carefree game unravels into two parallel journeys: the dog, navigating a mysterious underground world, and the child, confronting the disorienting sensation of a loss he cannot comprehend.

With fluid, organic illustrations that carry the weight of the story, this fable unfolds with raw emotion, haunting beauty and evocative power.

Judy in disguise

VALENTINA GRANDE & IRENE CARBONE

Reincarnation, recognition, and reality checks:
meaningful creation does not require fame.
Self-realization comes in small, intimate ways.

In the working-class suburbs of London, anti-heroine Judy, a plus sized and sharp-tongued lesbian, is struggling with suicidal thoughts. Already reeling from her partner leaving her for a younger lover, she develops partial paralysis as a side effect of a vaccine.

Ready to end her life, she is stopped by two spiritualists who reveal that she is the third reincarnation of a brilliant soul whose work only achieves recognition posthumously, previously inhabiting the bodies of Nick Drake and John Kennedy Toole. They urge her to discover what creative work she may have already produced that could give meaning to her life. As she revisits her past, Judy uncovers an old comic she drew as a teenager about her father's unjust dismissal from a factory. Could this be her salvation?

ALICIA PALMER & ROCÍO CONCHES

These aren't your typical fairytale princesses: these women are out to change the world.

A modern twist on classic stories, these tales feature brave young women tackling today's issues: body image, the erasure of women in history, environmental destruction and social inequality.

Cinderella runs a small organic farm and lives sustainably until an agent from the International Movement of Fairies offers her a life-changing opportunity. Belle, a curious teen, discovers her local bookstore is almost entirely devoid of female philosophers. Ariel, in a wheelchair with a megaphone in hand, takes on an oil giant, exposing its lies about climate change.

Bitter Sweet Doce River

JOÃO MARCOS MENDONÇA

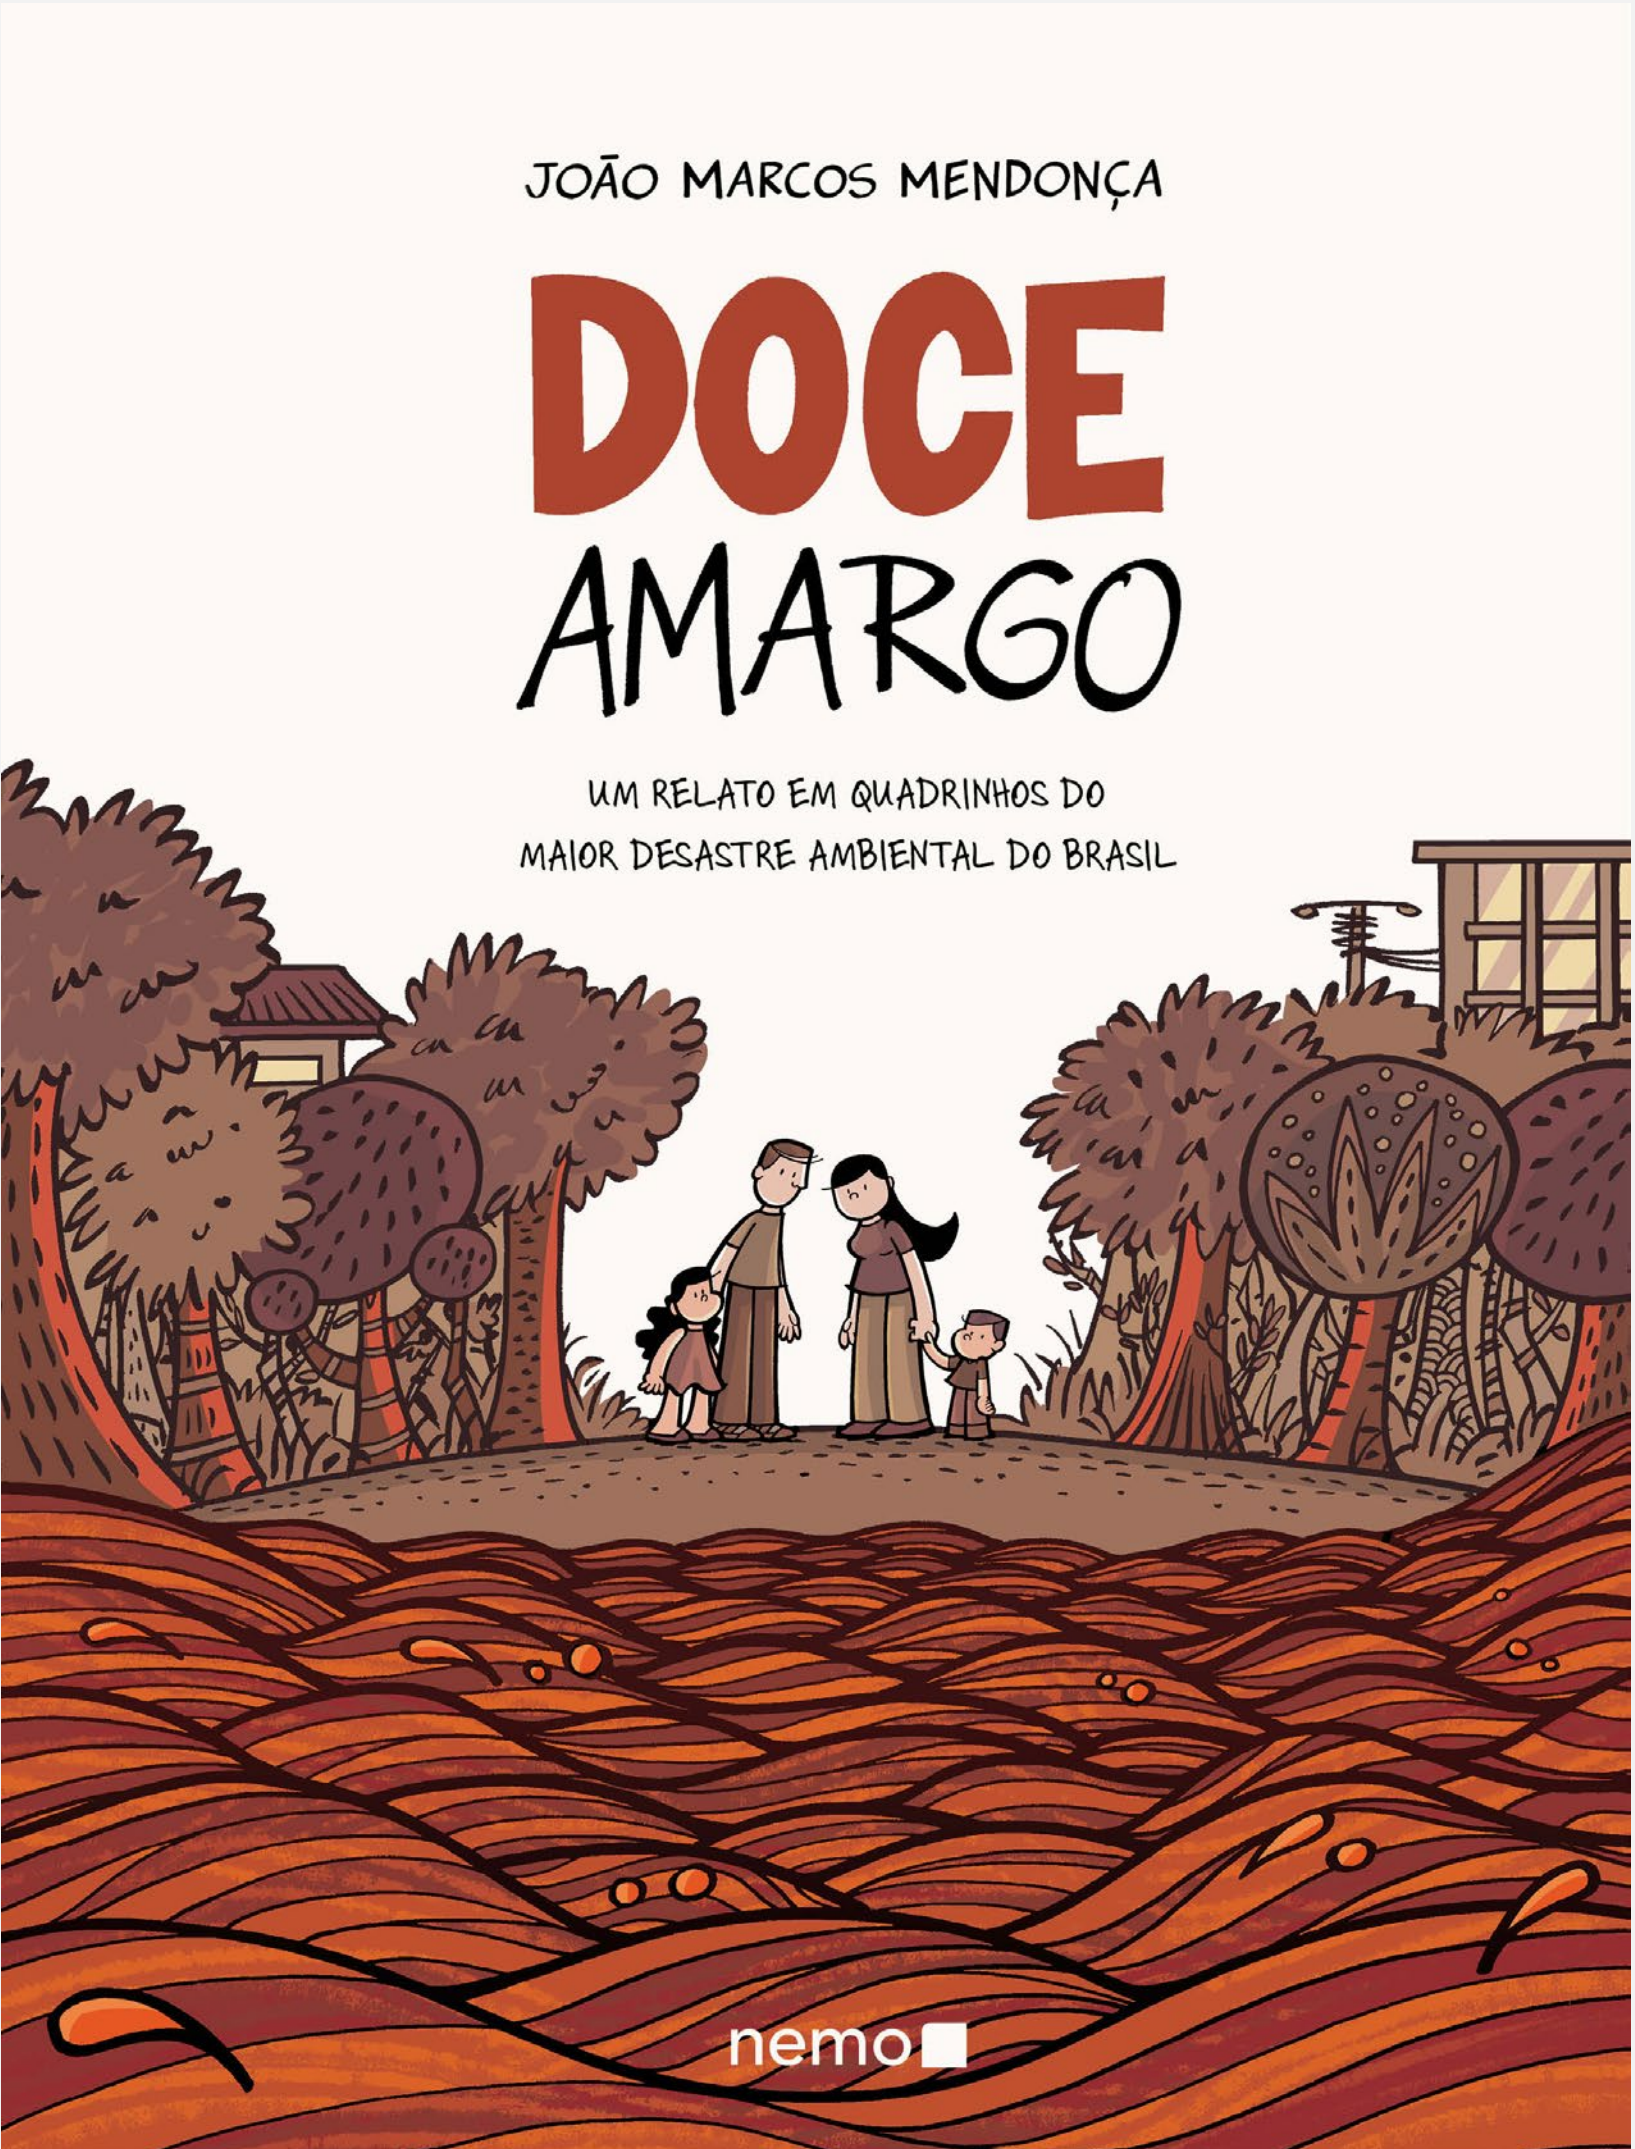

A graphic reportage of Brazil’s greatest environmental disaster.

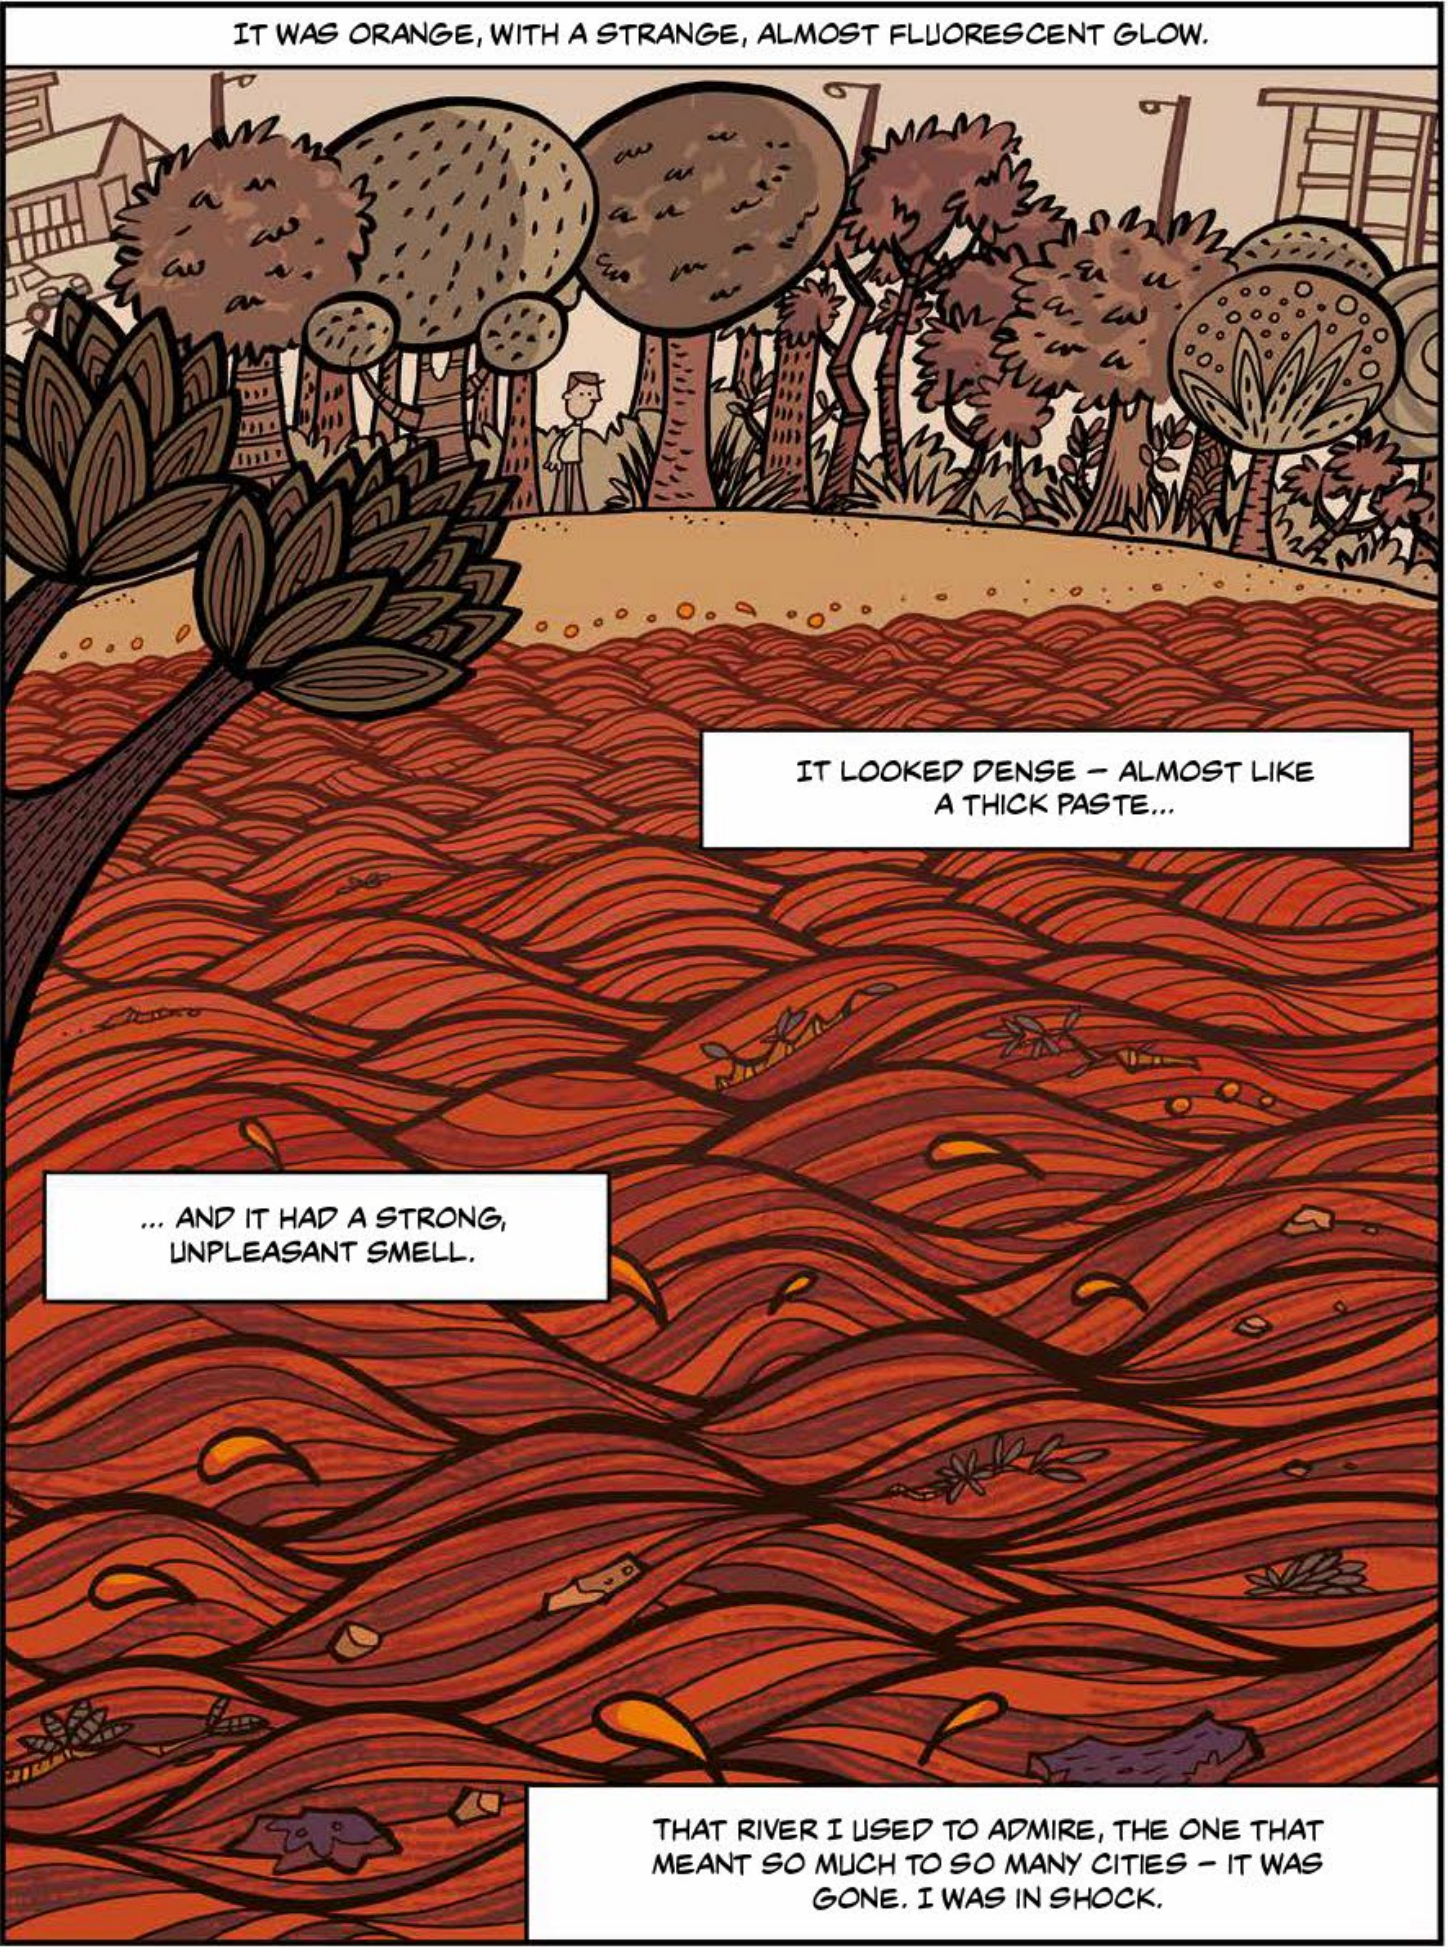

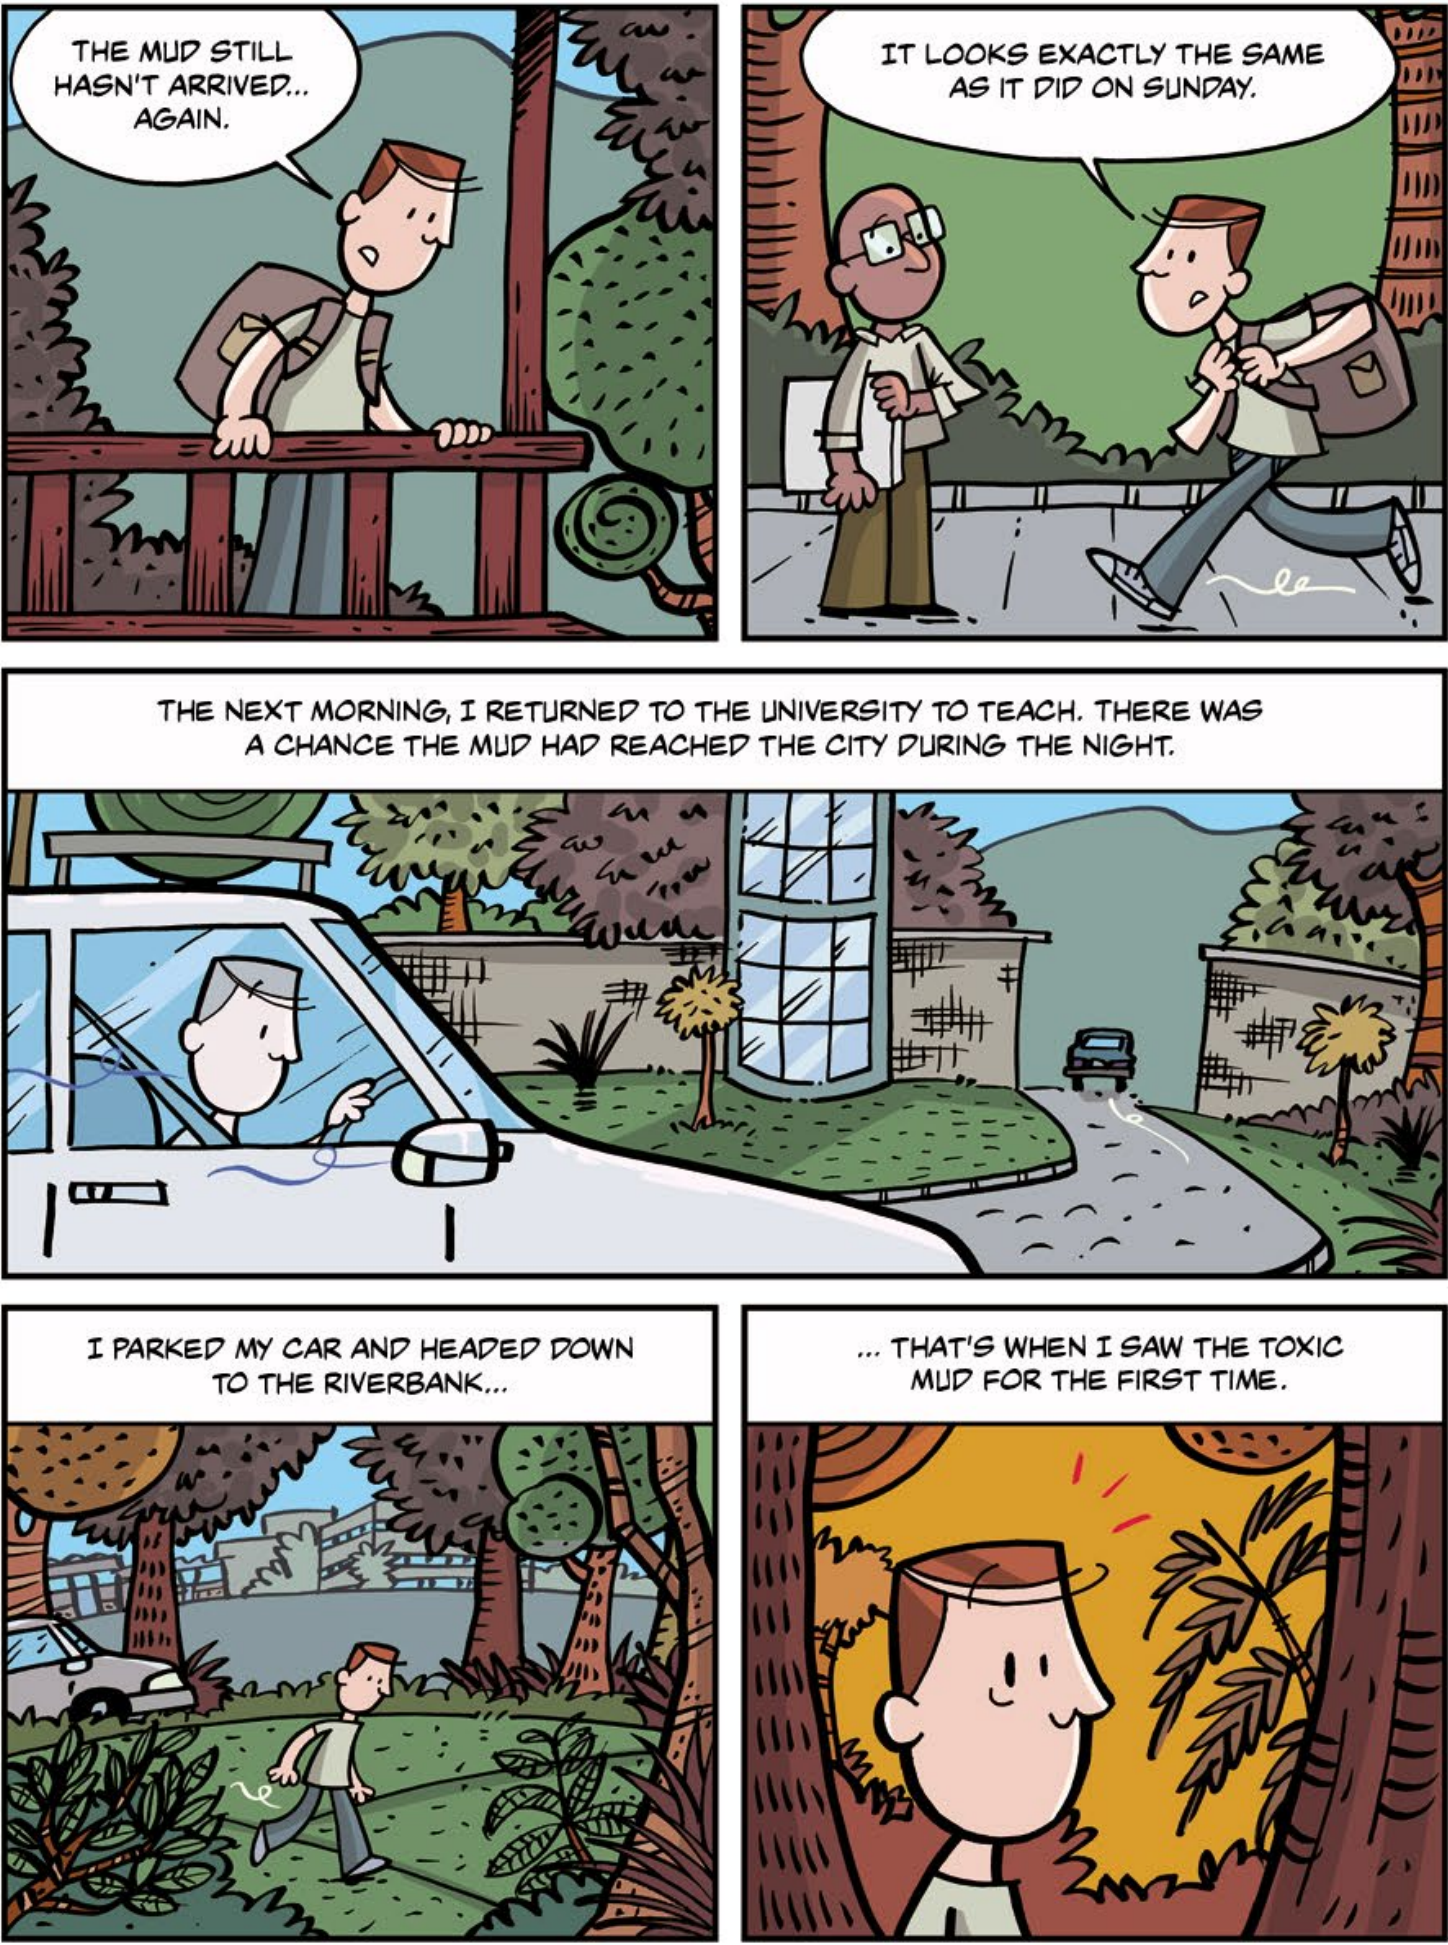

In 2015, a dam belonging to an iron mine collapsed in Brazil, triggering an environmental disaster of unprecedented scale. Fifty-five million cubic meters of toxic mud rushed downhill, turning the Doce River, a vital source of drinking water for entire communities, into a polluted stream and devastating local ecosystems.

Bitter Sweet Doce River tells this story through the eyes of the ordinary family of an art university teacher living in one of the many affected cities. Oscillating between incredulity and anger over the lack of accountability, he narrates the disaster from the inside, capturing both personal and collective struggles with a naivety reminiscent of Guy Delisle’s observational style.
